

Seminar: Work Place Investigation

Like you, national business consultant Kristine McCardle often feels the frustration of our workers' compensation system. To get some control over the claims Kristine completed training to become a Certified Work Place Investigator.

Kristine brings to your company the experience of a Small Claims Judge Pro Tem, an attorney, and a Certified Work Place Investigator. All this experience fused together has earned her the nickname, "The Interrogator."

Kristine's combination of real-life stories and her high energy techniques connect with her audience at an intense, engaging, and individual level.

Reserve this innovative and aggressive approach to your claims.

“ Learning investigation techniques gave me a feeling of some control with our claims. Before, I was delegated to the sidelines; now I feel like I’m in the game. ”

Work Place Investigation Seminar:

When an employee comes to you to file a claim do you just fill out the claim paperwork, and submit it to your carrier? If so, let me teach you how I file a claim.

It should not be a walk in the park for an employee to file a work comp claim; unless it's a legitimate claim. Most claims are a warning alarm that something is wrong; wrong in safety, management, or perhaps morale. This seminar will address each of these real issues which may be going on in your company.

This engaging two hour interactive seminar teaches interview techniques that get real answers; who to interview, when, where, and how. You'll learn to ask the tough questions with our real world workers' compensation scenarios.

No company is too small; if you have workers' compensation insurance then this training is a must have.
