

Valentina Morales

Valentina Morales has always had a passion for art and animals and it comes across in her work. Since she was four years old, Valentina has been able to take anything she can get her hands on and turn it into a work of art.

More than two decades later, Valentina's favorite subjects include animals, geometric shapes like mandalas and nature. Most of her work consists of acrylic paint, chalk, and different forms of photography.

Born in Bogota, Colombia, Valentina finds places to add tiny drops of her upbringing into the styles of art to really give it her own flair. Now, she resides in Palm Beach County, Florida and is an active member of the Wellington Art Society.

Valentina is the Head Artist at a local Trader Joe's and is in charge of all the signs, endcaps and displays around the store. You can also find her work every Winter at the Lake Worth Street Art Festival where she'll usually be covered from head to toe in chalk, painting some kind of animal.
