Program Description

JROTC is a program designed to motivate young people to become better citizens. The program of instruction helps today's students develop goal setting and communication skills as well as leadership skills in preparation for the postsecondary environment. The JROTC curriculum known as Leadership Education and Training (LET) is a developmental program instructed within the framework of military organization and discipline. Physical fitness is a required activity as well as drill and ceremony (marching).

Special Features

Col T. Clemons, US Army-Retired is the program Senior Army instructor.

1SG A. Phoenix, US Army-Retired is the assistant instructor.

There is no service obligation associated with this course; however, enlistment in the armed forces at a higher pay grade is possible with the successful completion of 3.0 credit hours of JROTC. Uniforms and textbooks are provided at no charge.
