What's the difference between a seal and a sea lion?

You can easily see a sea lion's ears—just look for the little flaps of skin on the sides of the head. Seals don't have ear flaps, just tiny ear openings.

Sea lions are mammals and must breathe air, but they need to dive to catch food. With the help of nostrils that pinch closed automatically, a sea lion can stay underwater for up to 40 minutes at a time.
