

The reason we don't have more of God is that we have so much of self. We won't be full of the Spirit when we're full of ourselves. I used to love being Richard Kirby. Though I was never much outwardly--no accomplishments. nothing to brag about--I had a pretty good mind and a rich inner life.

Not so much anymore. Life has taken away any cause for self-regard. I'm no longer infatuated with being me. But that's okay. This is just where God wants me--not so full of Richard. Now I find myself doing naturally what Paul suggests, what I once thought impossible: esteeming others better than myself. (Phil. 2:3b). This new, reduced state isn't as painful as I imagined; it's even somewhat comfortable and safe feeling. So much so that I find myself sincerely praying, "reduce me more, Lord; more of you and less of me." All for Jesus, Richard
