Connect! Sunday Reflection Remain Vigilant for the Coming of Christ November 14, 2018 • Angie Windnagle

Throughout all the readings, the call is to remain vigilant, not for the bad stuff that will happen but for the coming of Christ who is Love. We aren't being told that we need to be alert and anxious solely because everything will be so terrible. Rather, we need to be alert and pure of heart so when that time comes, we will be like those we hear of in Daniel who will "shine brightly like the splendor of the firmament ... and shall be like the stars forever." Our vigilance needs to be a vigilance of heart, remaining intently fixed on Christ and casting off sin at every chance. The Psalmist echoes this saying, "You are my inheritance, O Lord!" It is about Him, and it always has been. Through the worst of what the world can become, we have the hope and the invitation to remain steadfast and cling to our High Priest who does not defile but rather heals and gives life.

In the Gospel, Jesus tells us to take a lesson from the fig tree and "know that he is near" when we see the signs. In some way, the signs are already before us. Each day, then, we have a choice to live aware or unaware. We can become part of the darkness around us and be consumed by it, or remain alert with a heart so focused on Christ that any counterfeit can be immediately spotted. This happens through the small moments of our daily life. So how will we choose to live?
