

- Bill Pullman (Age 35+ - White, Black, Asian, Native American, Latino, Middle Eastern, Multi-Racial, Pacific Islander)
He/Him/His – Pronouns performed as written, actors of all genders will be considered.

Bill is a blue-collar working man in poor health and the weight of his family's future on his shoulders.

- Linda Pullman (Age 35+ - Black, Latino, Multi-Racial, Pacific Islander, Middle Eastern, Asian, Native American)
She/Her/Hers – Pronouns will be performed as written; actors all of genders will be considered.

Bill's wife and Ray's mother; she feels caught between the characters and struggles to navigate the tension growing in their household. Has been out of work ever since she lost her job at the factory.

- Ray Pullman (Age 15-20 – Black, Latino, Multi-Racial, Pacific Islander, Middle Eastern, Asian, Native American)
He/Him/His – Pronouns may be performed differently than written; actors of all genders will be considered.

Bill and Linda's child. Ray is determined to go to college and escape a life of being a mine worker like Bill. Ray is intelligent, but stubborn, constantly challenging Bill over the future of their family.

- Rusty (Age 30+ - White, Black, Asian, Native American, Latino, Middle Eastern, Multi-Racial, Pacific Islander)
He/Him/His – Pronouns may be performed differently than written; actors of all genders will be considered.

Owner of "Rusty's Bar," which Bill often drinks at. Bill's friend and confidant, often hearing out Bill's troubles over the bar and commiserating. Rusty is willing to challenge Bill's perception of Ray because Rusty has a complicated relationship with his son and ex.

- Jeane (Age 30+ - Black, Asian, Native American, Latino, Middle Eastern, Multi-Racial, Pacific Islander)

She/Her/Hers – Pronouns may be performed differently than written; actors of all genders will be considered.

Appears as the gas station attendant at the beginning and end of the play. Bill trusts Jeane and visits often, but the narrative slowly reveals something truly strange is at play with Jeane and the gas station.