

The seriously ill child has often been ping-ponged between home and school and back again until some gross act of delinquency or some pattern of behavior became so intolerable to teacher or classmates that the child was removed from school....no teacher can devote a great deal of time to the detriment of others,...but is it also true that school is the one activity which is “normal” to a child...which is part of his growing up. To remove all opportunity for learning is to remove much opportunity for recovery.

Bert Kruger Smith, 1964
No Language But a Cry