BE AWARE OF SCAMMERS

Don't let these imposters scam you.

Scammers are targeting you and your money
3 imposters to watch for

The number of scams targeting people are growing by the year, often playing on your trust or potential lack of tech savvy.

1. The "Tech Imposter"

These scammers may contact you to "help" with a non-existent problem — seeking access to your computer and confidential information.

2. The "Romance Con"

Often lurking around dating and social sites, these scammers try to gain your trust before asking for your money.

3. The "Phony Family Fraudster"

These scammers impersonate grandchildren and other family members, claiming to be in trouble and in need of your money.

Things you can do to help avoid scams

Stay connected in your community and with loved ones. Talk to a family member or trusted friend before taking action.

Keep an eye on your accounts for unusual purchases, transfers, or unauthorized payments.

Watch out for signs of potential financial exploitation by caregivers or relatives.

Avoid any requests to send gift cards, money, or personal information to anyone you don't know.

Share these tips with your friends and family.
