President's Message Stuart Sax

My "Unsung Hero" award this month goes to Gloria Avner. There is not enough room in this column to explain all that Gloria accomplished via calls and emails over the summer to coordinate our High Holy Days services with Rabbi Danny, Cantor Mark, and a host of members of our congregation. Her perspectives and insight led to new ideas and a new level of meaningful prayer in our services. Gloria is the very definition of the kind of dedication it takes to make a synagogue function.

Speaking of the holidays, there were many defining moments in our High Holiday services, but there is one moment that stands out far and above all others. Even in failing health, Jim Boruszak told me two weeks before the holidays that he would be there for his Torah aliyah and the Cohanim priestly blessing. It was not an easy task, but Rabbi Danny, Cantor Mark and Gloria made special arrangements to accommodate Jim by doing the Torah service from the floor level in front of the bima. As Rabbi Danny said, "To also bring the Torah closer to the people."

It was a tremendously emotional moment for Jim, who kept his promise to be there for his congregation. And for those in the sanctuary it was an equally emotional moment that we shared with a dear friend, a pillar of the KJCC, and a real mensch. The tears we shared were of respect, honor and love and that moment defined what this congregation is all about. We care and we share. Always have. Always will.

Many of you commented positively on my "Take A Seat" email and I implore each and every one of you to take those words to heart in the coming year. All of the programs that are planned by our Sisterhood, Ritual Committee (thanks again to Gloria), Adult Education, Holocaust, and other committees can only be successful if we make them a priority and support them by being there. This month and in the months ahead there will be visits and discussions from Rebecca Boehling, Rabbi Ed Rosenthal and Rabbi Rich Agler. There will be b'nai mitzvot, kayaking adventures, fundraising events, special services, and a few surprises along the way.

Nothing that we plan and/or propose can be accomplished without the ongoing financial support of you; our congregants. Membership renewal is the beginning of giving, not the end. Find excuses this year to participate in your KJCC rather than excuses to be absent. Your chair is waiting. Take a seat.

Sisterhood Lauren Sax

I hope you all enjoyed your holidays. We have taken a spiritual inventory, and hopefully renewed our commitment to our wonderful KJCC and the values and ideals our Sisterhood embodies. The women of Sisterhood have certainly shown their dedication by providing the entire congregation with a wonderful Erev Rosh Hashana Dinner, Rosh Hashana Onegs and a sumptuous Break-The-Fast. Erica Lieberman-Garrett had a vision for her dinner and it showed. It began with candle lighting and delicious homemade challah. Then two kinds of matzo ball soup was served with brisket, chicken and vegetarian loaf following. Platters and bowls of cucumber salad, potato kugel, kasha varnishes, carrot tsimmes & vegetables graced the buffet as well. The meal was rounded off with a dessert of mouthwatering honey cakes and apple crisp. Huge applause goes to Erica and all of her outstanding cooks for their hard work. Her vision became a caloric reality that many of us were very lucky to be a part of.

Barbara Bernstein “took the bull by the horns” as they say & took charge of our Rosh Hashana Onegs. She shopped, chopped, washed and dried and plated all of our wonderful goodies along with her helpers. She is KJCC’s very own hurricane. I hope your feet are feeling better, Barb! And we certainly can’t forget our honorary Sisterhood member, Marc Bloom. Besides being the best Barista, he is always there to lend an extra hand in the kitchen. We bow to you, Marc and are ever grateful for all your help.

Erica was also in charge of Break-The-Fast. Again, the congregation was treated to a lavish buffet. I know of no other congregation that puts on such a large complimentary meal after Yom Kippur and it certainly touches my heart when I see how our small Sisterhood comes through to celebrate the end of the High Holy Days.

There are far too many others who cooked, baked, sliced, diced, set up as well as cleaned up to thank in this short column. Just know that I am extremely appreciative for everyone’s help. Simply taking out the garbage, filling wine glasses or arranging a platter means more than you can imagine. We-I -couldn’t have done it all without those who lent some time and muscle.

I was remiss in the September issue of Chai-Lights of not acknowledging all those who helped me out during the summer in the kitchen. With Angela being away until November, Friday nights become an extra burden on me and the Sisterhood women. Huge thank yous to those who stepped in as hostesses for some of the Friday onegs. Even those ladies who volunteered at the last minute either to set up or clean up, your help did not go unnoticed.

Our gift shop has been restocked thanks to Susan Gordon and in it you will find some exciting new Judaica. You can always purchase online but if you buy from us, there is no tax and no shipping. Plus, there’s service with a smile! You can’t beat that.

Reserve the date of Sunday, January 20th for our next fundraiser which will be held at the beautiful oceanfront home of Lorena and Michael Kaufman. It will be a social event with some music and some surprises thrown in. Nancy Kluger, Barbara Knowles, Georgia Landau and Jane Friedman are all making it happen. Stay tuned for more information in upcoming Chai Lights. ◇

Take a Hike!

National Geographic has named the Israel National Trail (INT) one of the World's Best Hikes and added it to its list of the top 20 "Epic Trail" hikes. The list's author describes the INT as one that "delves into the grand scale of biblical landscapes as well as the everyday lives of modern Israelis. But beyond the immense sense of history..., the trail powerfully connects to something that often gets lost in all the headlines – the sublime beauty of the wilderness of the Middle East." He recommends walking the trail between February and May, taking advantage of "trail angels," people who offer places to stay free of charge to thru-hikers. The Israel Trail was established by the Society for the Protection of Nature in Israel (SPNI) in 1995. It is 620 miles long and runs the length of the country from Kibbutz Dan in the north to the Eilat Field School in the south. (Jerusalem Post, 8-13-12)

Hope They Don't Wear Them While Driving.....

Ultra-Orthodox Jewish men in Jerusalem have managed to separate the sexes on buses and even sidewalks in their neighborhoods where signs strongly advise women to wear high-necked, long sleeve blouses and ankle-length skirts. Now there's something new to keep women out of clear sight completely. Men who don't want to look at women they consider immodestly dressed can now wear eyeglasses that blur their vision. The glasses have stickers on the lenses allowing wearers to see clearly up close but produce blurry vision farther out. The glasses sell for about $6. (Associated Press, 8-8-12)

They Look Like the Average House Cat

In late July, four rare sand kittens were born at the Ramat Gan Safari, an open-air zoo near Tel Aviv. The sand cat (Felis margarita) is considered extinct in Israel because other mammals have pushed them away. In the rest of the world however, they are listed as a "threatened species" by the International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN). The mother cat came to Israel from Germany two years ago. The proud papa, who arrived two years earlier, is from Poland. The Safari park is part of a European breeding program for sand cats. They are the only species of feline to truly live in a desert environment. They are able to survive without drinking because they get all the water they need through their food. Sand cats live mostly in the deserts of Asia and Africa. (www.dailymail.co.uk, 8-16-12)

Breaking the Glass Ceiling, Jewish Style

At the end of August, Forbes Magazine released its list of the "2012 World's 100 Most Powerful Women." There are several Jewish women on the list and Jill Abramson, executive editor of the New York Times (and the first woman to lead the 161-year-old newspaper) is named number five. The list includes world leaders, executives, entertainers and entrepreneurs. Other Jewish women on the list are Sheryl Sanberg, Chief Operating Officer of Facebook; Irene Rosenfeld, CEO and Chairwoman of Kraft Foods; Susan Wojcicki, senior Vice President of Google; Mindy Grossman, CEO of the Home Shopping Network; fashion designer Diane Von Furstenburg; Anna Wintour, editor-in-chief of Vogue Magazine; Safra Catz, CFO and President of software giant Oracle and Mary Schapiro, chair of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. (www.jta.org, 8-23-12)

Honoring Ludwig Guttman

A major exhibition at the Jewish Museum in London honoring Sir Ludwig Guttman, coincided with the opening of the 2012 London Paralympic Games. Guttman is known as the “founding father” of the modern-day Paralympic Games. What began as a small gathering of disabled British World War II veterans in 1948 has grown to become one of the largest international sporting events. Mr. Guttman, a Jewish neurosurgeon who fled Nazi Germany and went to Britain, saw athletic competition as therapy for patients with spinal injuries in 1948, a time when such injuries were considered a death sentence. He is credited with transforming perceptions of people with disabilities and changing the course of thousands of lives. Guttman took patients off sedation to intentionally make them uncomfortable and forced them to sit up and work muscles, trying to keep them motivated. He tirelessly argued that with proper treatment paraplegics could live full and rewarding lives. He believed that competition would encourage his patients to work harder and got them involved in wheelchair basketball. Guttman recognized that these patients were still paralyzed but he was determined to make them taxpayers. Guttman was honored with knighthood in 1966. Though he died in 1980, he lived long enough to see the Paralympic Games grow. Guttman’s daughter, Eve Loeffler, 79, was a torchbearer and this year’s Mayor of the Paralympic Village welcoming the participants to the games. The competition brought some 4,200 athletes from 165 nations to the city. (www.dailymail.co.uk, 8-29-12)

Such a Deal.....

El Al Israel Airlines is going to honor all tickets that were purchased during a computer glitch this past summer which set off a three-hour buying frenzy. Thousands of round-trip tickets were sold for only $330. Danny Saadon, El Al’s vice president of North America released a statement in which he said El Al would honor the low fare. “The decision...was to save face with El Al... Hopefully we have provided an opportunity to many first timers to visit Israel...” (Alan, do you think you can duplicate this little “computer glitch” for the KJCC trip to Israel in 2013?) (www.jta.org, 8-9-12)

Israeli Refrigerator on Mars

NASA’s Curiosity rover which landed on Mars on August 6th includes a refrigerator that was developed and manufactured in Ein Harod, the kibbutz located in northern Israel. Ricor Cryogenic and Vacuum Systems specializes in miniature refrigerators designed to reach very low temperatures (minus 173 degrees Celsius) for military, space and commercial applications. The refrigerator is being used for one of the experiments on board the Mars rover. (www.ynetnews.com, 8-19-12)

In Memoriam

-Gerhard “Gad” Beck, one of the last gay Jewish survivors of the Holocaust, has died. He was 88. Born in Berlin, he was the son of a Jewish father (his mother was not born Jewish). Beck’s autobiography, An Underground Life: Memoirs of a Gay Jew in Nazi Berlin, was published in 1999. In it, he describes that he managed to stay alive because of forged papers, false identities, and the good will of many individuals. Beck claimed that his religion was a greater peril than his sexual orientation. Beck worked with a group of underground Zionist operatives and is credited with smuggling rations, cash and clothing to fellow Jews who were living in hiding. It is believed he helped some Jews flee to safety in Switzerland. Only three months before the Nazi surrender, Beck was betrayed, arrested and held by the Gestapo. After the war, Beck took part in efforts to bring Jewish refugees to Palestine and he aided in Israel’s War of Independence. In the 1970s, he went back to Berlin and taught German students about the Jewish culture that had once flourished in their country. (www.washingtonpost.com, 6-26-12)

-Sami Rohr, a major philanthropist, died at age 86. Rohr reportedly gave some $250 million to Jewish causes, especially Jewish education and culture, through his Rohr Family Foundation. A former Colombian Jewish real estate mogul, Rohr gave tens of millions to Chabad to establish outposts throughout the former Soviet Union, on college campuses and at remote spots around the world. In 2006, his children named a $100,000 prize for Jewish literature after him in honor of his 80th birthday, the Sami Rohr Prize for Jewish literature. The award recognizes “the important role of emerging writers in examining the Jewish experience.” (The 2012 prize went to Gal Beckerman’s When They Come for us We’ll Be Gone: The Epic Struggle to Save Soviet Jewry.) Rohr grew up in Berlin but his family left the country after Kristallnacht. He eventually moved to Bogota, Colombia where he made his fortune in real estate. In 1981, Rohr and his late wife moved to Florida. (www.jta.org, 8-7-12)

-Art Modell, former owner of the NFL’s Baltimore Ravens and Cleveland Browns, died recently at the age of 87. He was a pioneer in the NFL’s partnership with television networks and pushed for the creation of “Monday Night Football.” He and his wife Patricia (she died a year ago) were known for their philanthropy. Modell grew up in an Orthodox neighborhood in Brooklyn the son of an electronics dealer who lost everything in the 1929 stock market crash. He dropped out of high school to assist the family working as an electrician’s helper and earned 45 cents an hour. After serving in the Army Air Corps during World War II, Modell saw the potential of the growing television industry. In 1960, when he was 35 years-old, he worked at a Madison Avenue advertising agency and learned that the Cleveland Browns were for sale. Avid sports fan that he was, Modell paid $3.93 million for the team. In 1996 he moved his team to Baltimore changing its name to the Ravens and in doing so, broke the hearts of Browns’ fans (sort of like some of us who are still hurting from the Brooklyn Dodgers’ move to Los Angeles). The city of Cleveland went to court to block the move and the case ended with a $12 million settlement from Modell, with a promise that a new team be created in Cleveland with the Browns’ name and record. In 1999, due to financial difficulties, Modell sold a minority interest in the

Ravens to Steve Biscotti, who eventually bought the controlling interests in 2004. (www.jta.org, 9-6-12)

-Marvin Hamlisch, prolific composer and arranger of dozens of Broadway musicals and movies, died recently. He was 68. Hamlisch earned three Academy Awards, four Emmys, four Grammys, three Golden Globes, a Tony and a Pulitzer Prize for the Broadway musical, A Chorus Line. He composed more than 40 film scores (Ordinary People, Sophie’s Choice, Take the Money and Run, and most notably, The Way We Were, for Barbra Streisand). Hamlisch was born in New York to Viennese Jewish parents. He became the youngest student ever accepted to the Juilliard School – he was seven years-old. (www.jta.org, 8-7-12)

Did You Know...

-Israel’s Cabinet has approved plans to bring the last of Ethiopia’s approximately 2,200 Jews to Israel over the next two years. More than 120,000 Ethiopian Jews now live in Israel after waves of immigration over the past thirty years. Known as Falash Mura, they are members of a community that converted to Christianity under duress more than a century ago but have come back to Judaism. Some have questioned whether the Falash Mura are actually Jewish and as a result, the immigrants are routinely required to go through a religious conversion. Once in the country, many face problems assimilating because of cultural differences and at times, racism. (Associated Press, 7-8-12)

-Mayor Michael Bloomberg proclaimed August 28th that just passed “Richard Tucker Day” in New York City, honoring the late famous cantor who went on to be the celebrated lead tenor of the Metropolitan Opera. Tucker would have turned 99 this past August. There were tributes all day from New York’s classical music radio station, the Metropolitan Opera, the New York Philharmonic, Lincoln Center and Carnegie Hall. And for the hungry, the Stage Deli offered an off-menu special sandwich, “The Richard Tucker Reuben” (the singer was born Rubin Tucker in 1913). (The Forward, 8-27-12) ♦

L'Chaim v' I'Zikaron - To Life and Remembrance

by Gloria Avner

The ceremonial turning of the year feels more intense than ever—more serious, immediate, and in our faces. It's odd to say this, but I am grateful—not of course for the suffering of our friends and families fighting illness or for the leave-taking of those whose struggle is over. What I am grateful for is their teachings.

Not all learning happens in school. And although we study the same lesson each year, I feel more porous this year. It's sinking in.

I am knocked out, split apart, and filled up by what I have seen, heard and felt among us: people defeating all odds of life expectancy through sheer will-power, love of life, and need to do for others; people in pain and under stress smiling and reassuring those worried about them; people with illness in their own home making chicken soup and bringing it to comfort others with equal and greater difficulty. The grace of it all is unutterable. It is beyond mind and beyond words.

Maybe that is why we need ritual, music, poetry and prayer along with our Torah.

At the beginning of every service, we acknowledge we are the only synagogue in 126 miles and that we welcome all branches of Judaism. We also welcome Jewish non-believers. There are agnostics among us as well as Orthodox, Conservative, Reform, and Reconstructionists. It is good that we come together on High Holidays. It is tradition, over 5000 years worth, that unites us and makes us a tribe, not solely how we celebrate our Judaism. Sitting together, contemplating as a group our behaviors that have not “made the mark” or expressed our best, most compassionate selves, we resolve together to do better, be better, through prayer, turning towards the principles of our tradition, and acting generously toward one another.

When the shofar blasts its final wake-up call, that long tekiah g'dolah on Yom Kippur, I want to take that vibration into this new year, stay awake, and honor the teachers all around us, past and present, both in body and in spark. How brilliant our ancestors were, to create core ceremonies, both for individual and group prayer, the Kaddish every time there is a service, and Yizkor, our ceremony of remembrance that takes place four special times each year.

Most of us were together for the first Yizkor, the fixed one that takes place at Yom Kippur. May we all be together again for the second one, just weeks away, coming right after Sukkot on Shemini Atzeret

(we will observe it on Friday, October 12). A New Year has begun. We, and our Sunday School children, will roll back our Torahs to their start. Taking turns holding the Torahs in our arms, we'll dance around the synagogue seven times. Each week over the course of this year, we'll recount once more the unique stories that unite us, from the creation of the world to the creation of a people.

The child who blows a shofar, dances a Torah around our sanctuary, fills a blue box with coins, decorates a Sukkah, and sings blessings enthusiastically, whether by reading Hebrew or by heart, is a gift, a prayer for continuity, as are the new members, young and old, who continue to join us.

To be a member of a shul is to be part of a living organism. To dismember is to tear apart. To re-member is to put back together, to bring to life. Our loved ones stay alive and remain part of us as long as we remember them. What a fine tradition, and so helpful in times of sorrow. To life. To continuity. And to remembrance. ♦

The Palace Gardens Difference

For nearly 25 years, The Palace Gardens Assisted Living Community in Homestead has been known as a leader in providing outstanding care to seniors. While our grounds and the campus are beautiful, there are more than a few reasons why The Palace Gardens is different from all others.

1. Continuum of Care –

The Palace Gardens is part of The Palace Family of Senior Living Communities which offers accommodations that meet everyone's needs, from Independent Living and Assisted Living, to Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation, and even Home Health. You can rest assured that at The Palace, your needs will be met, no matter what may happen in the future.

2. Palace Training & Education Center

Because our residents come first, every employee must reflect the higher standards of our communities. Based on Ritz-Carlton procedures, a comprehensive orientation program reinforces this focus. Regular training and educational programs continue so that residents will always receive the very best care and services.

3. Local Ownership –

Founded in 1980 by Helen and Jacob Shaham, The Palace is privately owned and locally operated by these self-made individuals who foresaw the need for quality senior living environments. Their constant involvement today ensures the tradition they established for the communities and services bearing The Palace name: only the best.

To see for yourself why The Palace Gardens sets the standard Florida senior living, call or visit our web site.
