THE GREAT CONFERENCE SCHEDULING DEBATE

8 or 9? 9 or 8? That is the great debate going on across the country. Over the Summer there was a lot of conversation after both the SEC and ACC decided to stay status quo with 8 conference games even after both leagues grew from 12 to 14 schools.

The Pac-12 has been playing 9 conference games since 2006. The Big 12 has been playing 9 conference games since 2011. The Big Ten actually played 9 conference games from 1981 - 1984 and will begin playing 9 conference games again in 2016.

Nick Saban was for a 9 game conference schedule in the SEC but he was the only coach in that league in favor of a 9 game conference schedule. He reasoned that when the SEC expanded from 10 to 12 teams in 1992, the league responded by going from a 7 game slate to an 8 game slate. When the SEC added Missouri and Texas A&M, Saban said it only makes sense, once again, to add a game to account for additional conference membership. He said, what's the point in adding schools if you're not going to add games to assure every school will play each other in a 4 year span? That would guarantee that a student athlete would get to play every other conference member if he stays for 4 seasons. However, the other 13 SEC head coaches wanted to stay at 8 conference games, to make it easier to win enough games to qualify for bowl games, thus saving their jobs.

The ACC also voted to remain at 8 conference games due to the agreement that the 14 league schools would play 5 non-conference games vs Notre Dame every season. Obviously, schools like USC and Stanford counter the ACC's decision with the fact that they are playing 9 conference games AND playing Notre Dame every season.

Both the ACC and SEC countered their decisions with the fact that every school will be required to play at least 1 opponent from the other Power 5 conferences every year. Obviously, the annual match-ups of Florida (SEC) vs Florida State (ACC), Clemson (ACC) vs South Carolina (SEC), Georgia Tech (ACC) vs Georgia (SEC) and Kentucky (SEC) vs Louisville (ACC) eliminate those schools from finding an opponent from a Power 5 league every year but the other 20 SEC & ACC schools will have to aggressively find opponents willing to play to abide to their conference requirements.

Critics claim that many schools from the SEC & ACC eventually will find a way to schedule some of the less powerful programs from the other Power 5 leagues, thus shying away from another potential loss. Will we see games vs Ohio State, Oklahoma, Oregon, Michigan, Texas, USC, Nebraska, Oklahoma State and Stanford? Let's hope so because that is what the fans want to see. Obviously we will probably see even more SEC vs ACC home and home series being put together. A Tennessee-Clemson, Auburn-Virginia Tech, Alabama-Miami (FL) or LSU-North Carolina series would be fine in the eyes of public perception and more importantly, in the eyes of the College Football Playoff selection committee.

This debate will continue until we see if the College Football Playoff selection committees' decision over the next couple of years and if they reward the conferences that play 9 conference games more than the ones that stay at 8 conference games.

CONFERENCE GAMES IN 2016

Below, we list the Big 12, Pac-12, Big Ten, ACC and SEC. We show how many schools each will have in 2016, the number of conference games each will play and the percentage of conference opponents each will play every season.

BIG 12 CONFERENCE	10	9	OUT OF 9	100%
PACIFIC-12 CONFERENCE	12	9	OUT OF 11	82%
BIG TEN CONFERENCE	14	9	OUT OF 13	69%

SOUTHEASTERN CONFERENCE	14	8	OUT OF 13	62%

GAME-OF-THE-WEEK

CLEMSON
GEORGIA

No Tajh Boyd. No Aaron Murray. No problem. These two programs are much larger than players like Boyd and Murray because, the players that will replace them are good prospects and very capable of leading the Tigers and Bulldogs to a lot of wins on the field.

At Clemson Senior Cole Stoudt will be taking the snaps for Dabo Swinney's squad. He is very capable but, let's not kid ourselves, he's no Tajh Boyd. The loss of Sammy Watkins is also huge, so look for Clemson to be a little more conservative on offense this season. Defensively, DE Vic Beasley is unquestionably the leader on that side of the ball where the Tigers must improve their rush defense that gave up 155.7 yards per-game in 2013 if they want to have a chance against Georgia and All-American RB Todd Gurley.

Mark Richt has 17 starters returning from a disappointing 2013 campaign that saw the Bulldogs finish 8-5. Hutson Mason is the QB with some experience after starting vs Georgia Tech and Nebraska down the stretch but it's the Georgia secondary that must improve. The Bulldogs allowed 227.4 yards passing per-game in 2013 and a lot of those yards were after the opponents broke tackles. If Georgia can stay healthy, they should compete for the SEC Eastern Division crown.

Look for this to be a competitive game but at the end, home field advantage gives Georgia enough to come away with the victory.

NCAA DIVISION I FBS WINNINGEST PROGRAMS SINCE 1950

Below we have the 50 winningest NCAA Division I FBS Programs since 1950. We list them in order of highest winning percentage over the past 64 years (1950-2013). We list their won-loss record in each of the 6 full decades as well as their up-to-date won-loss record in this decade (2010-2013). If a school won at least 75% of their games in a decade it is listed in BOLD. For a school to be included in this list they must have been classified as a Division I FBS program for 10 seasons. The figures represent on-the-field results and do not include forfeits or vacated games.

DECADE BY DECADE AP POLL RANKINGS

From 1936 thru 2013 the Associated Press released 1,070 weekly college football polls (including preseason and post bowl polls) during each season to rank the top major college football teams in America. Below we list every school or club that has ever appeared in those weekly polls. The 105 current Division I FBS schools that have been ranked at least once in the weekly AP poll are listed in BOLD CAPS. The 56 non Division I FBS Schools as well as the WWII Service teams that have been ranked at least once in the weekly AP poll are listed in Italics. We have broken it down to show how often schools were ranked decade by decade to get an idea how some were ranked very often earlier and how some programs have come on strong recently.

MAJOR CONFERENCE EXPANSION SINCE 2000

Since 2000 there have been 71 instances where schools have been added to major conferences (including to the now defunct WAC). Not included are the schools that were charter members of the Sun Belt in 2001. This list includes the new conference for the school, the school on the move, the seasons that the school competed in their new conference and the number of years they have or did compete in their new conference. NOTE: The Big East Conference was renamed the American Athletic Conference prior to the 2013 season.
