

CHRISTIAN CRUSADE FOR TRUTH

Intelligence Newsletter

"And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." John 8:32.

September - October, 1997

Prince Charles, Princess Diana And The U.N.

"So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." (Gen. 1:27-28)

In the Hebrew, the word dominion in this passage means to subjugate, to prevail, to take over. Now just suppose that the most powerful, wealthiest families in the world are planning on forcing all of us to defy God's command in that passage.

That is exactly what they are intending to do and they are enticing us into believing it is a good idea, all in the name of "protecting the environment." Could Princess Diana of the House of Stuart have been an obstacle to their plan?

This issue of the Intelligence Newsletter will reveal the purpose of Prince Charles in this massive venture. We have all read reports of the Prince's escapades in the occult, womanizing, polo, and all sorts of activities of the jet set. Could this all be a smoke screen to hide the real purpose of this man and his family?

To better understand the part that this British nobility plays in the formation of a world government, it would be fruitful if the reader would study, or review, the history of England at the time of William the Conqueror and the circumstances surrounding the Magna Carta being forced on King John, the grandson of William, in 1215.

Then one should study the circumstances surrounding the agreements between Manesseh Ben Israel and Oliver Cromwell in 1650. It was agreed that by "marrying" the Jews money with British nobility, together they could rule the world. Between them they developed the world renown British Commonwealth or Empire. It has been said that "The sun never set on the Commonwealth." It can also be said that the sun never set on the graves of young English boys who died in the name of the crown hacking out that commonwealth.

Then one must ask, "Why did the British Colonial System come to an end since World War II without a wimper, let alone a war or two, from the British or the International Banking Cartels." Carroll Quigley, in his book The Anglo-American Establishment, N.Y. Books in Focus, 1981, page 137 stated: "They (Rhodes Round Table Group) feared the British Empire might fall into the same difficulty and destroy British idealism and British liberties (sic) by the tyranny necessary to hold on to a reluctant empire. And any effort to hold an empire by tyranny they regarded as doomed to failure...the Group feared that all culture and civilization would go down to destruction because of our inability to construct some kind of political unit larger than the national state, just as Greek Culture and civilization in the fourth century B.C. went down to destruction because of the Greeks' inability to construct some kind of political unit larger than the city-state. This was the fear that had animated Rhodes, and it was the same fear that was driving the Milner Group to transform the British Empire into a Commonwealth of Nations and then place that system within a League of Nations."

What does the British Nobility of the House of Windsor, and in particular Prince Charles, have to do with the world government?

We will excerpt from an outstanding article written by Joan Veon which was found in the Thursday, August 28, 1997 edition of the Wisconsin Report, PO Box 45, Brookfield, WI 53008. Joan Veon is a Christian lady who is well established as a reporter and has credentials to be allowed to attend unusually important press conferences.

"...Up until the fiftieth anniversary of the UN, I had not seen any 'royalty' connection with the United Nations, the successor to the League of Nations. Although I had found a speech by Prince Charles commending the 'Brundtland Commission' for their work in bringing the term 'sustainable development' (discussed later in this article) into everyone's vocabulary, there appeared to be no direct connection until I attended the fifty first meeting of the IMF/World Bank in October 1996, where I happened upon a booklet directly connecting the Prince of Wales to the United Nations and World Bank. From its contents, it appears he is a very major player on the global scene---more so than we realize. So then who is Prince Charles?

Prince Charles.

Prince Charles

"Interestingly enough, Prince Charles was born in 1948, the same year Israel was birthed. In 1969, his mother made him 'Prince of Wales' in a ceremony at Caernarvon Castle in Wales. The investiture of Charles marked the beginning of his royal duties as he became a Knight of the Garter. It is the members of the Order of the Garter that comprise the Queen's 'inner circle' of confidants. According to his biographer, Anthony Holden, 'At the same moment (Prince Charles was being invested), across the world, three men were preparing to land on the moon.' As the twenty-first Prince of Wales, the future Charles III has an abundance of titles which include, Earl of Chester, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron Renfrew, Lord of the Isles and Great Steward of Scotland, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Knight of the Most Ancient and Most Noble Order of the Thistle, and Great Master and Principal Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

Prince Charles' Lineage.

"Prince Charles is literally related to everyone of royal blood in the world, along with a few who are not, like Charles Darwin. According to the English genealogist Gerald Paget, who spent most of his 92 years tracing the lineage of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Charles, 'HRH (Prince Charles) breeding is the most important in the world...he is heir to the world's greatest position that is determined solely by heredity.' In the introduction to Paget's monumental work, The Lineage & Ancestry of H.R.H. Prince Charles, Prince of Wales, Paget writes, 'His Royal Highness is cousin or nephew, in varying degrees, of all the six wives of King Henry VIII. He has many descendents from the royal houses of Scotland, France, Germany, Austria, Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, Spain, Portugal, Russia, and the Netherlands....In addition to Charlemagne and William the Conqueror, he numbers amongst his ancestors such historic characters as King Alfred the great, King Harold, who was slain at Hastings, Llewelyn the Great Prince of North Wales, Owain Glyndwr, Warwick the Kingmaker, Margaret, Countess of Salisbury (the last of the Plantagenets), the Protector Edward Seymour, the Duke of Somerset and his rival John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland.... Louis IX, King of France, the Emperor Rudolph of Hapsburg, Catherine I, Empress of Russia, Robert Bruce, Mary Queen of Scots....' Paget notes, 'Links through marriages or a common ancestor can be found to such diverse people as Genghis Khan and twelve Presidents of the United States of America (for the last see Burke's Presidential Families of the United States of America.'

"Prince Charles' biographer, Anthony Holden, goes further and explains that Prince Charles 'descends over and over again from Charlemagne and Frederick Barbarossa and all the great dynasties, Hapsburg and Hohenstaufen, Guelph and Hohenzollern, Bavaria and Saxony, Hesse and Baden.... In Italy, his forefathers include the Dukes of Savoy and the Emperor Frederick II...and the medieval Kings of Sicily, as also the Orsini of Rome (Pope Nicholas III was his ancestral uncle)...in Spain, they include Ferdinand and Isabella....and thus El Cid himself. The Prince's Anglo-Saxon and Danish royal forefathers sprang from Dark Age kings who incarnated the storm-spirit Woden, and among his pagan Celtic royal forefathers were King Niall of the Nine Hostages and the dynamic Iron Age sacral kings of Tara, the great sanctuary of ancient Ireland. Through the Lusignan crusader kings of Cyprus, titular kings of Jerusalem, Prince Charles descends a millennium further back from king Tiridates the Great, the first Christian monarch of all (under who Armenia was converted in AD 314, before even Rome itself), and thus from the divine Parthian imperial House of Arsaces (247 BC), which reigned over Persia and Babylonia and was in its time the mightiest dynasty in the Ancient World."

What have we learned so far? We can readily see that Prince Charles has ancestors from almost every nationality of ancient Europe. On the surface this seems somehow to be so very "noble." Lets look a little deeper.

All of us recognize that we as individuals and families know and understand things that we just seem to somehow "know." We don't speak of it especially nor were we specifically taught it. We just know it. There is such a thing as DNA race memory. It is what causes some peoples to have a natural propensity (an aptitude, inclination, disposition or proneness) for certain beliefs. Other peoples have other propensities. Further, it is the essence of what causes "conspiracies" of long standing within certain families. Obviously, these "conspiracies" can be for good or for evil.

Returning to Prince Charles' background, he is the descendent to nearly every major custom, more, and religion that the entire continent of Europe has ever produced. That could leave a person somewhat confused as to just what to believe or to follow, particularly religion. Do we follow the precepts of Jesus Christ, Talmudism, Hinduism, Wodenism, etc., or maybe a mixture of all of them? With this in mind, we will return to Joan Veon's very revealing article. The real purpose of Prince Charles and the One World Order is going to be shown.

The Rise of Prince Charles.

"Charles is a complex man with many sides. He is a man of action, having served in the Royal Navy in a number of junior and senior command positions. He is a helicopter pilot and has over 900 hours flying a wide variety of jet fighter planes, including the Chipmunk, Spitfire, Nimrod, Phantom, Jet Provost, and Harrier T4, to name a few. He enjoys polo, and is an artist and a musician. In short, he is a Renaissance man, a man for all seasons.

"Unlike his uncle, the Duke of Windsor, who never worked after he stepped down from the throne in 1936, Prince Charles oversees a number of trusts, is involved in organic farming and homeopathic medicine, has been critical of an active in the field of architecture, creating an Institute of Architecture in an effort to blend architecture with nature, has worked behind the scenes pushing the huge radical environmental agenda of the United Nations into the forefront of world politics, and is now one of the, if not the key, leading figures on the face of the globe creating 'public-private' partnerships in developing countries. This entity, the public-private partnership, is the new form of governance (a polite term for government) worldwide. His nonprofit organization, The Prince of Wales Business Leaders Forum-PWBLF is spearheading this governmental change along with major multinational corporations, most of which have more money than many third world countries. (Public-private partnerships are discussed in more detail later in this article.) In a 1988 speech at a European Environment Conference, the Prince said, 'There is a growing realisation that we are not separate from Nature; a subconscious feeling that we need to restore a feeling of harmony with Nature and a proper sense of respect and awe for the great mystery of the natural order of the Universe....We are beginning to realise that whatever we do to Nature--whether it is on the grandest scale or just in our own gardens--is ultimately something that we are doing to our own deepest selves.' In order to understand what he is doing, we must discern the personal beliefs that guide him.

Religion and the Prince of Wales.

"Not happy with the Christian faith, Charles began to search for the meaning of life in the late sixties, while at Cambridge. According to his biographer, 'he began a tentative inquiry into the field of what its practitioners referred to as 'psychical research' or 'parapsychology'--and which its adversaries ridiculed as 'dabbling in the occult.' Later on in the mid-seventies, South African born writer, explorer, and mystic (who was also a friend of the Queen Mother) Laurens van der Post became a spiritual counselor to Charles. It was van der Post who helped him explore the natural world as well as the inner world, where 'the outer depends on the inner.' He went on to study Buddhism and Hinduism, mixing the relationship of the individual to the environment in economic, social, and spiritual terms. The convictions that Charles began to form--'what he was soon to say about alternative medicine, architecture and the environment sprang from a spiritual feeling for the mystical in mankind.'

"Charles was greatly influenced by James Lovelock who formulated the Gaia hypothesis, a belief based on the Greek goddess Gaia, the Earth Mother, and which today is known as the worship of the earth and the concept of holism which is based on the principles of harmony, balance and the interconnectedness of natural phenomena, combining them with a search for inner awareness. Another way to understand holism is that it adopts the evolutionary principle that man is equal to all other forms of nature (he does not have dominance over the earth as found in Genesis 1). In the seventies, the Prince started to involve himself with organic farming, architecture, and homeopathic medicine, all of which are the components of a 'holistic' philosophy, by returning to nature, Mother Earth."

Leaving Joan Veon's excellent article for a moment, some comment on the preceding is in order. It should be noted that in almost every instance of these "alternative" religions, there will be good points mixed with a myriad of nonsensical thoughts. For example, organic farming and homeopathic medicine are obviously extremely worthwhile. They are examples of being good stewards of the land and environment over which we are to have dominion. But one doesn't have to leave the Christian faith to believe that! As we continue in our study of the environmentalists' real motives we will realize that they are not quite the stewards of the land that they purport to be! Returning to Joan Veon:

" Interesting enough, it was in the early 1970's that the United Nations adopted the environment as its 'mantra.' Think about the implications. All of us share the environment; it is a common denominator no matter where you live in the world. The only way to change the laws of every country and to take control is to make the environment the focal point. Today, it is the goal of the United Nations to pass laws on the global level that will then be ratified by all of the member states. These laws will impact all of society in every country, and eventually the world will be ruled by 'environmental governance,' which is a result of public-private partnerships. Prince Charles, through his Prince of Wales Business Leaders Forum, is setting up public-private partnerships in third world countries. We will see, as we progress, a new form of feudalism, this time led by a new balance between business, the private sector, and government. This corporate feudalism is one that fits the twenty-first century.

"Known as the 'Green Prince' or 'Eco-King,' Charles, like most radical environmentalists, elevates the position of the environment to one of dominance over man, an inversion of Genesis 1. From his first speech on the environment given at the Countryside Conference in 1970, to his global push for sustainable development, the environment is key, the key to changing society, how we live, where we live, and lastly, our values.

"...Most people will not find Prince Charles or his environmental activities as headlines of the major newspapers. For example, as a means of pushing the radical United Nations environmental activities to the forefront of the world's attention, Prince Charles held a two-day international seminar in April 1991 aboard the royal yacht Britannia, moored off the coast of Brazil. His goal was to bring together key international figures in an 'attempt to achieve a degree of harmony between the conflicting attitudes of Europe, the United States and the developing nations, led by Brazil over the United Nation's environmental agenda.' Among others, he invited (then) Senator Albert Gore, senior officials from the World Bank, chief executives from companies such as Shell and British Petroleum, the principal NGOs (non-governmental organizations), European politicians, including the British ministers of Overseas Aid and the Environment.' If Prince Charles is only a prince in title and heredity, supposedly without any power, why then is he hosting a pre-conference of great magnitude to set the tone for the United Nations Rio 'Earth Summit,' which was held over a year later? Why did he not attend the conference with great fanfare, revealing his part? (Recall in the July-August, 1997 issue of the Intelligence Newsletter we clearly showed that it was Maurice Strong, originally from Canada and a part of the British Empire, who organized the Rio Earth Summit.-Ed.)

"It should be noted that Vice President Al Gore and Prince Charles have the same mentor, now deceased oil industrialist Armand Hammer, who was god-father to Charles' firstborn son, Prince William. It was Armand Hammer's father, Julius, who was active in the American Socialist Labor Party, naming his son after the symbol of the communist party, the arm and hammer. By 1919, Julius was involved in establishing the left wing section of the Socialist Party of the United States, which was an early beachhead in America, a revolutionary Leninist organization.

"Hammer had direct access to many American presidents, senators, and congressmen to help further his cause and provide him with the contacts he needed to sell grain, fertilizers, and other American products to the Russians. Among the senators, however, Al Gore Senior was key, working endlessly to introduce Hammer to members of the Senate, a job which

"It is noteworthy to point out that the top environmentalists in the United States and United Kingdom are Al Gore and Prince Charles. In 1966, Prince Charles became a patron to Intermediate Technology (IT), an international non-governmental organization that helps poor people lift themselves out of poverty through technology. In keeping with the ideas and concepts fostered by The President's Commission on Sustainable Development, Intermediate Technology is being promoted here in America.

"Lastly, it should be noted that the new prime minister of Britain, Anthony Blair, is a close friend of Prince Charles and supports his environmental positions. The Prince, Blair, Clinton, and Gore are a formidable group as we go into the 21st Century."

In past issues of the Intelligence Newsletter we have given in-depth lessons on the relationship between the International Banking Cartel such as the Rothschilds and the nobility of England. The origin of this dates back to William the Conqueror in 1066. It was William, or rather we should say the money lenders who were brought to England from Roen, France by William, who started the infamous "City of London," which is the world's financial center.

Then, at the time of Oliver Cromwell in 1650, a new "covenant" was made with the money lenders. Mannaseh Ben Israel covenanted with Oliver Cromwell that with a "marriage" of their money with the nobility, together they would go forth and rule the world. That covenant is still in force. We know that the colonial system was disbanded without a wimper. We should now realize that the current effort at the One World Order is but the rebirth of the colonial system. As we shall see, it is intended to be magnitudes more oppressive than the colonial system of old. Now, to return to Joan Veon:

"Sustainable Development. In addition to the Gaia philosophy, the world of earth over man, there is another component to the environmental agenda, called 'sustainable development.' A key report, which coined the phrase 'sustainable development,' is from the 1987 World Commission on the Environment, dubbed 'the Brundtland Committee,' after its cochairman Gro Harlem Brundtland, now former Prime Minister of Norway. The report gave birth to a new concept of life as found in sustainable development. I have researched the early beginnings of this philosophy and found the concept used once in the 1972 Programme of Action for the first United Nations environment conference held in Sweden and also in the 1977 Constitution of the USSR, Chapter 2, Article 18. The phrase is not used in UN documents until the 1992 Rio 'Earth Summit,' the Nations Conference on the Environment and Development-UNCED.

"Since that time, sustainable development has permeated local, state, and federal governmental levels in all countries, the policies of multinational corporations, education, and the environment, including zoning, planning, etc. Sustainable development has been incorporated into the whole philosophy of the United Nations and their mega-conferences throughout the 1990's, the International Chamber of Commerce (which filters down to the local level), the World Bank and all of its lending practices, the International Monetary Fund, and many other global groups and organizations. Here in the United States, President Clinton, by Executive Order in 1993, established The President's Commission on Sustainable Development, which has added this dimension to most federal levels of management, and as a result, is being adopted by all other levels of government, without the consent of Congress.

"The theory of sustainable development can be likened to a prism. A prism is shaped like a long, slender pyramid in that it has three sides. As you turn it, the light catches the different sides of the prism, reflecting different colors. The three sides of the sustainable development prism are social, economic, and environmental thinking that mirror Charles's philosophy of the relationship of the individual to the environment in economic, social, and spiritual terms. Even though these issues appear to be separate in areas of influence, they have all been integrated as one through the public-private partnership concept. As a result of environmental ideology permeating all aspects of life, it takes on a spiritual aspect that mirrors the Gaia philosophy, thus fulfilling the spirituality found in the 'Small is Beautiful' concept. When the three become one through partnership (agreement), they form the philosophical approach that will change government and life as we have known it in America.

"Sustainable development means that all of the world's assets are finite and that we must preserve today's resources for future generations. What this implies is that we must first know how much we have of every resource, which must be counted somehow, then monitored so that it can be determined who is adding to the earth's resources and who is using up the earth's resources. Volunteerism may just be one way for you to 'put back' what we have consumed if we have not produced enough at work to cover what we consume. The World Bank and International Monetary Fund are studying ways in which the production of every person on the face of the earth can be measured. Interestingly enough, we are at the mercy of the United Nations and the environmentalists for all of the answers.

"What this really involves is control of all of the earth's assets so that no one uses them up or misuses them. It further involves a whole level of law, both national and international, so that these resources are protected, and for anyone who misuses them, according to the environmentalists interpretation, there are penalties and fines. In addition, the concept of personal property rights has to be changed so as to 'protect the resources,' which means you no longer have the right to live where you want, a concept called 'biodiversity,' and you no longer have the right to use your property the way you wish, because how it will be used will be dictated by those who are 'monitoring' the world's resources, and how you chose to use it has to conform to what is good for all mankind. In other words, personal property rights are given over to the 'greater good of the whole,' which is collectivism, and which is embodied in socialism.

"...In 1993, the World Bank established a division for sustainable development. The World Bank has since added four other dimensions for monitoring the assets of the world through sustainable development. They are: (1) natural capital-- the minerals of the earth, water, forests, anything natural; (2) manufactured capital--anything built, such as roads, buildings, homes, etc.; (3) human capital--every living person on the earth, particularly their age, health, experience, education, and ability to work; and (4) social capital--how people think, that is, politically correct thinking. The World Bank and IMF for the most part have and are in the process of developing how to measure each of these in every country, including the United States. All UN and UN related organizations and agencies espouse sustainable development. These concepts permeate UN documents, goals, seminars and pilot projects. They are coming to your house soon.

Charles the Environmentalist.

"When he attended Trinity College in the late 1960's, he studied archaeology, anthropology, and history, all of which are key with regard to the environment and architecture....The purpose of the Prince of Wales Business Leaders Forum is 'to promote the practice of good corporate citizenship and sustainable development internationally, as a natural part of successful business operations.' In 1990, PWBLF members unveiled their world agenda in Charleston, South Carolina where they hosted their first conference called 'Stakeholders: The Challenge in a Global Market.' Over 100 CEOs from major multinational organizations attended this two-day conference. American firms included Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, USA Today, Sara Lee Corporation, BellSouth, J.C. Penney, Schering-Plough Corporation, The Equitable Life, Johnson Publishing, KKR, Monsanto, Pillsbury, the New York Stock Exchange, Exxon, Caterpillar, Procter & Gamble, and DuPont.

"...The Prince of Wales Business Leaders Forum is an educational charity with close to 50 multinational corporations on its executive directorate. They include companies from the United States, Britain, Germany, Japan, and several other countries. The U.S. corporations who work very closely with the Prince include: 3M, American Express, TRW, Coca-Cola, SmithKline Beecham, ARCO CIGNA, DHL Worldwide Express, Levi Strauss & Company, The Perot Group, and U.S. West International. Additional partners are the American Chamber of Commerce, American Hotel & Motel Association, The Atlanta Project, Charles Stewart Mott Foundation, The City of Charleston, the Ford Foundation, the Kellogg Foundation, the New York City Housing Partnership, the Office of Ronald Reagan (who, along with George Bush, was knighted by the Queen), the Soros Foundation, Texaco, Tufts University, Turner Broadcasting, USAID, and Warnaco. Guests and experts to Charleston included: United Way of America, King Constantine, Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC), Elizabeth Plater-Zyerk (architect of the 'holistic' planned community, The Kentlands, in Gaithersburg, MD), William Reilly then Administrator with the EPA, Rep. Charles Schumer, of New York, Thuroow, Dean of the Sloan School of Management, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. Jessica Tuchman Matthews from the World Resources Institute and member of the Council for Foreign Relations.

King Charles III.

"There has been much speculation with regard to when Charles will become king. I surmise that he does not need a throne, for he already has one. The environmental agenda via sustainable development, and public-private partnerships with the world's largest and strongest multinational corporations, many of which have cash flows and assets exceeding that of most countries, provide Charles his throne. It appears that he rules behind the scenes, encouraging, expanding, and pushing the agenda of the United Nations, partnering with the World Bank and other global agencies, all of which are advancing world government, a philosophy with which he is not uncomfortable. After all, there have been many kings, popes, and world leaders who have tried to attain it.

"When one takes a look at the 48 companies on his directorate, 23 of them are part of Business Week's Global 1000 corporations with a market value of over $1 trillion. Apart from the manufacturing base he has amassed, travel and tourism is the world's largest industry and generator of jobs. It provides direct and indirect employment for 200 million people, one in every 9 workers in the world. Its gross domestic product generates more than that of the gross national product (GNP) of the United States in 1995.

"It is through public-private partnerships that corporations will replace the rule of a nation's. When you have a board of appointed people representing government, corporations, the private people sector, and non-governmental organizations, money rules, not government or the people. What we see in the making is a new form of governance transcending national borders, elected officials, and the will of the people. Little by little, people will be squeezed out and the New World Order will fully emerge.

"Lastly, the environment is something all the people of the world share--the air, water, fish and fowl, Whoever controls the environment, controls man. That is the objective and goal. The work that Prince Charles is spearheading has been gaining momentum. He is at the heart of what is going on in the world as it relates to power , control, philosophy, and 'forward' thinking at every level of society. Since Prince Charles lives and breathes sustainable development, a better title for him would be the 'Sustainable Prince.'

"Because of who he is, doors automatically open and people flock to him. His tentacles are very deep, reaching into every area of life, business, and government. He transcends politics, national borders, and religion. He is very powerful by way of position, lineage, inheritance, importance, and influence. He is out to remake society and mold it into his image, which is based on Gaia, a usurpation of Genesis 1. This alone will change life for every person on earth, as they will become slaves to the new twenty-first century feudal landlords, where every crust of bread they eat will be measured against what they produce in order to protect resources for future generations. Is all of this the new divine right of kings? The person the mainstream media would have us believe is Charles is not the real Charles. The real Charles is extremely powerful and should be recognized as a very major player in the end-time game." End of quotes from Joan Veon's article dated August 28, 1997, released two days before Princess Diana was killed in Paris.

The EPA Police Force.

"He gives rain on the earth, And sends water on the fields. So that He sets on high those who are lowly, And those who mourn are lifted to safety. He frustrates the plotting of the shrewd, So that their hands cannot attain success. He captures the wise by their own shrewdness And the advice of the cunning is quickly thwarted. By day they meet with darkness, And grope at noon as in the night. But He saves from the sword of their mouth, And the poor from the hand of the mighty. (Job 5: 10-15 NAS).

We have pretty well established the fact that the One World Order crowd is using the environment and its problems, real or not, as a catalyst to bring in the new colonial system. Of course, there are many names being used to denote this new "governance" but they all mean just one more attempt at the Tower of Babel. As the previous article clearly showed, Prince Charles comes from a long line of "wannabe" world rulers.

Now that we in the United States understand that the supposed concern for the environment is being used for their own evil purposes, they are now making some changes in their system. For example, in Mexico, across the Rio Grande River in the so-called Border XXI Program, the multinational companies have constructed numerous manufacturing plants. Of course, we know that this was done to utilize the cheap labor in Mexico with the end result of the concept being an example of this new "colonial system" of the New World Order.

Many of these plants are producing huge amounts of smog, water contamination, noise pollution, etc. and this is being observed in the United States. In fact, the EPA continually grades U.S. cities along the border as being heavy polluters when it is actually the plants which are in Mexico doing the polluting!

So now the plants are packing up and moving further South, deeper into Mexico, to get away from being observed in the United States. This way, they can apparently pollute all they want without Americans realizing the farce. Mexico City, for example, is one of the most polluted cities in the world. The same situation occurs all over the world where these multinational corporations are operating as a part of this new "colonial empire."

Meanwhile, back in the United States, the Environmental Protection Agency is developing a National Police Force for the purpose of enforcing the environmental laws now in force as well as those yet to be promulgated. The number of laws to be enforced, all in the name of the environment, is staggering. Congress, who passes the laws, doesn't even know the number of the regulations which have been written to enforce these "for motherhood and against sin" laws. The only place that the thousands of pages of regulation are available is the Federal Register. How many people do you know who diligently read all of the Federal Register on a daily basis? "Ignorance of the law excuses no one." Are they really serious about this?

A very interesting article was found in the September, 1997 issue of Handguns magazine. The article describes the training being given at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC) with its headquarters located at Glynco, GA. Their main facility is located near Brunswick, GA and it is here where the EPA trains their "enforcement officers."

The EPA has, as a part of its overall program, the National Enforcement Training Institute which trains its enforcement personnel at the FLETC. The EPA has four permanent staff members at the facility. These staff members "are responsible for the development of a broad variety of courses concerning the investigation of environmental crime."

The "investigative duties" of the EPA "Enforcement Officers" is to secure locations where evidence of alleged environmental "crime may be", obtaining evidence, performing surveillance, interviewing suspects and serving arrest and search warrants. This could remind one of the John Dillinger days!

Keep in mind, this is to enforce the environmental laws promulgated against the United States citizens, all-the-while the third world nations are belching out pollution to support the New World Order of colonialism.

The article in Handguns states, "when working a case, an agent must always be aware that a suspect may suddenly feel vulnerable and may attempt to eliminate the agent in order to suppress evidence. It is not uncommon for EPA cases to involve the smuggling of banned chemicals...." The type of chemicals very typically include freon F12 refrigerant which has been banned in the United States because it allegedly causes "ozone holes" in the atmosphere. The "colonial empire" companies make it in massive amounts in Mexico. Because it is now so expensive in the United States and only "approved" installers can use it, there is a large black market of the chemical which is smuggled into the country. This, of course, is a prime target for the EPA. Nothing is mentioned about the "ozone holes" cause by F12 in other countries!

Let us imagine another scenario for the EPA cops. As the last issue of the Intelligence Newsletter showed, in yet another effort to get all cattle removed from the western states, it has been determined that the Willow Flycatcher bird is endangered in New Mexico. Yet, as was shown, none of the many bird books of New Mexico even show the Willow Flycatcher as being native to the state! But, that doesn't matter. They have found some nests along the Rio Grande Valley, particularly in the Bosque del Apache Wildlife Refuge. The regulations now state that all cattle within a ten mile radius of a known nest must be removed, whether it is on private, state, or federal land. Incidentally, according to the Wildlife Service, as reported in the Livestock Market Digest, this "endangered bird" can be distinguished from other species because, "rather than the crisp, sneezy 'fitz-bew' of the northerly subspecies, it sings a more protracted, slurred 'fitz-za-bew,' with a burry 'bew' syllable." Are these environmentalists making fools of us or what? However, this would be a typical exercise for the EPA Enforcement Officers. Can you just imagine the response of an old time rancher when they come with all their gear for surveillance and arrest?

The article states that "convictions for environmental crimes often lead to jail sentences of over a year and fines greater than a million dollars." In the case of the Willow Flycatcher, if the rancher resisted in any way, he could very easily have his property confiscated and find himself in jail. The EPA seems to have a lot of power in this game of bringing in the world order!

The EPA officers are issued the Glock 19 pistol in the 9mm calibre. "The cartridge issued to them is the Remington 9mm4 load. It produces a velocity of 1310 feet per second and an energy level of 438 foot-pounds. It has a 89 percent one-shot incapacitation rate in actual confrontations according to research published by Evan Marshall and Edwin Sanow in their book Street Stoppers (Paladin Press, 1996)." They are also issued the Remington 870 shotgun using the nine-pellet Federal Tactical 00 buckshot load.

They also teach the officers to shoot for the center of mass, thus, along with the Remington 9mm4 cartridge, a kill is fairly well assured. This should impress the reader with the intentions of the EPA program.

The EPA Law Enforcement personnel are not just plain street policemen or sheriff's process servers. They are being trained to the same depth and precision as the Army's Green Berets or Delta Force. They are given in-depth train in combat type situations including the stress factors associated. They are given night-time light conditions with real life situations. Thus, all of this training is not simply to enforce the law. They are trained for military type assault work. They are more than peace officers. That should convince the most skeptical person of the real intentions--that being to use the real or imagined problems of the environment as a catalyst to bring in the world order.

In the past several issues of the Intelligence Newsletter, we have shown that the nobility of England, capitalists such as Maurice Strong in Canada and the United States, multinational corporations, the British and American governments at all levels, non-governmental organizations, churches, private environmental organizations, civic organizations, wealthy foundations, as well as many others, have gathered together to force one more time, a one world order on the entire world. God has told us repeatedly that He does not want a world order. He wants the nations of the world separated because they are each different and He has a purpose for all of them.

Another most important point. Just because God has allowed this current world order concept to proceed to its present situation doesn't mean that He has forgotten his Commandments or that He is dead. He has a principle which permits the "cup of inequity" to become full. He brings judgment in His due time and it is not for us to decide when.

In Jeremiah 25 we can read about God patiently waiting until the violations of his Commandments have reached His limits. "They said, Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the Lord hath given unto you and to your fathers for ever and ever: And go not after other gods to serve them (the goddess Gaia, mother earth), and to worship them (violate the dominion rule of Genesis 1), and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands (develop another world order as in Babel); and I will do you no hurt.

"Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the Lord; that ye might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt. Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts; Because ye have not heard my words, Behold, I will send and take all the families of the north, saith the Lord, and Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them..." (Jer. 25: 5-9).

Every one of these powerful world leaders are tempting God. Perhaps they think that it happened once in ancient Babylon but it won't happen again. They fail to realize that it is a principle. It happened more than once. It can, and will, happen again. Maybe they think they are actually doing God's will and that they are the righteous ones. "It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." (Deu. 6:16, Mat. 4:7)
