How I became a card counter

by Henry Tamburin

In one of my classes at the University of Maryland, our professor gave us a “statistics and probability” project. We had to make a presentation on any game we chose, what the rules were for the game, what the odds were for winning, and what, if any, were the best strategies for playing this game. I recollect some of my classmates choosing games like bingo and chess, but I chose blackjack instead.

My presentation shocked them when I explained that the game of blackjack could be beaten by using a strategy for playing your hands and increasing your bets only when the advantage shifted in your favor, using a technique known as card counting. In preparing for this presentation, I read several books that explained card counting in detail. Buoyed by the knowledge I had acquired, I made the decision to become an advantage player.

But reading about card counting doesn't make you successful at it. Learning how to track the cards accurately in a casino requires a lot of practice. However, I was determined to become a skillful card counter and with the help of my wife, Linda, I began the journey.

Based on all the information I had gleaned from the books, I decided to master the Hi-Lo card counting system. I would turn over each card one at a time while mentally keeping the running count. I knew if I counted all 52 cards accurately, my final count should be zero. I kept practicing at a relatively slow pace until I could accurately and consistently count down a deck of cards. Next, I focused on counting down a deck as fast as possible. Linda would time me on her watch and record how long it took me to count down the deck. After several weeks of repeating this exercise, I remember I was able to consistently do this drill in 25 seconds without making any mistakes.

In the beginning of my card-counting career, I only focused on keeping the count to vary my bets, betting more when the count was in my favor, and less when it wasn't. I always used basic strategy for playing my hands.

Linda would deal me hands on our kitchen table. I'd play each hand following the basic strategy while mentally keeping a count of all the cards that were dealt, and varied my bets based on the count. We practiced for weeks on end.

I vividly remember my first attempt at card counting in Las Vegas. I was doing fine until the dealer started making small talk with me; then a cocktail waitress stopped at our table and asked me if I wanted a drink. While all this was going on, there was music coming from a band somewhere in the casino that was rather loud. These playing conditions were not the same as my kitchen table, and with all these distractions, I wasn't able to keep track of the count. The trip turned out to be a disaster.

When we arrived home, I told Linda we had to go to Plan B for practicing card counting. She said, “What is Plan B?” I told her we would go back to practicing card counting only with the radio or TV on, and she would be making small talk while I played and counted, much like the dealers in Vegas. It took me a while to learn to keep the count under these conditions, but I finally was able to do it. Needless to say, our next trips to Vegas were much more successful (and profitable).

As the years went by, my expertise in blackjack began to increase. I learned how to calculate the true count when playing in multi-deck games, and how to vary my playing strategy based on the true count. I mastered the latter by making flash cards that had the hand on one side along with the dealer's upcard; on the other side I listed the index number for deviating from basic strategy. Linda used to flash those 30 or so index cards to me one at a time until I mastered all the index numbers.

At this point in my life I was living in New Jersey. Linda and I made several trips to Las Vegas every year to play blackjack, and on virtually each trip we came home with a profit, and our bankroll started growing. Then, in 1978, the first casino opened in Atlantic City, a mere 45-minute drive from my house. And the rest is history!

Gaming News

Huge jackpot, details revealed

A major jackpot of nearly $2.9 million was hit on a Dragon Link progressive slot machine at the Seminole Casino Hollywood in south Florida recently. It was a record jackpot for Dragon Link's manufacturer, Aristocrat Gaming, and the second highest ever at the Seminole Hollywood. It was a $25 machine with a 10x bet of $250, and the jackpot photo showed a credit balance of nearly $38,000 according to The Las Vegas Advisor. The Dragon Link isn't an advantage-play machine, the Advisor went on to explain, so they can safely assume that the player was a slot whale taking a long shot (with a bankroll of, say, $50,000-$100,000) at the huge progressive and accruing stratospheric comps in the process...and that they were very, very lucky.

Casino companies face class-action suit

According to WorldCasinoDirectory.com, four plaintiffs are suing IGT for allegedly “rigging” the Wheel of Fortune bonus wheel. The plaintiffs claim they lost an unspecified amount of money playing Wheel of Fortune and were deceived by the wheel, which “features equal-sized segments that create the illusion of fairness, but in reality, the outcome of the wheel is determined by a computer program that manipulates the results, stopping on segments with lower monetary values.” The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Nevada, also targets MGM Resorts, Bally's, Penn, Station, and Boyd, all of which “knowingly profit from machines that allegedly mislead players about their odds of winning.” The lawsuit accuses IGT and the casinos of violations of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), fraud, unjust enrichment, and negligent misrepresentation and argues that the rigged bonus wheel has led to “illegal siphoning of billions of dollars” from players. WorldCasinoDirectory opines, “The allegations in this lawsuit could have significant ramifications for the gaming industry,” though that remains to be seen.

Resolutions Bingo

As the New Year gets rolling and resolutions may be falling by the wayside already, a creative approach to setting goals for the year ahead is going viral online. The approach involves turning your resolutions into a bingo card, with each goal written into a square. When you achieve a goal, you mark it with an X and try to get multiple bingos throughout the year. Camille Smith, 26, of Philadelphia, said she has used a goal bingo board for the past two years and finds it keeps her engaged with her resolutions instead of writing them down once and putting them away.

"The bingo board is more like gamifying your goals," Smith, a chemical engineer and content creator, told Good Morning America. "And at least for me, it's been able to keep me engaged with my goals." She added of her success using the bingo approach, "I accomplished so much because I was consistently thinking about it all year, which is something that I hadn't experienced when I had just written my goals down." Bingo battle bad for Alabama town

The government in a tiny town in west Jefferson County was effectively shut down at press time following a state raid, a battle with the attorney general over bingo halls and an ongoing feud among city leaders. City accounts were frozen, employees were not being paid, and services for residents were ceasing in Lipscomb, home to about 2,000 people just outside Bessemer. "As a result, all city services are now suspended and payroll cannot be issued for city employees until further notice," Tonja Baldwin, the mayor of Lipscomb wrote in a statement. A judge had recently entered an order freezing the city's assets and all of the money in its bank accounts. The issue? Alabama Attorney General Steve Marshall is cracking down on electronic bingo halls, the small city's largest source of revenue. In Lipscomb, city hall was bitterly divided with council members blaming the mayor, and the mayor pointing back at them. The city previously approved an ordinance allowing electronic bingo. Tyson said services, including the town's police department and garbage pickup were in peril. The county provides some assistance, including street paving and infrastructure, but Tyson said they cannot provide other essential city services. "This is the harshest measure that I've witnessed since all of this bingo stuff started," said Gary Richardson, host of the Gary Richardson Morning Show on WJLD Radio. Along with his callers, Richardson, who is also mayor of the nearby city of Midfield, criticized what they described as a heavy-handed move from the attorney general. Richardson also said the state was hypocritical for allowing games in some places but not others. "Is that an adequate use of the state resources, them going out trying to enforce misdemeanor laws?" he asked.

Ask Dr. Roach

DEAR DR. ROACH: Seven years ago, I went to the emergency room and was told I had blood clots in my arms that traveled to my lungs. I started Eliquis. The doctor said I had a problem with factor V, but I don't have my blood results. Do I need to stay on this blood thinner? I know it has severe side effects. — M.T.

ANSWER: Factor V is a protein that is critical in making clots, and an abnormality in this protein can make a person bleed (although this is very rare).

What's more common is a condition called factor V Leiden (FVL), which makes the body resistant to the activated protein C, a natural anticoagulant. (Anticoagulants decrease blood-clotting and are sometimes referred to as "blood thinners.") So, the net effect of FVL is that it makes blood clots a little more likely. Many people have FVL, but most will not develop a blood clot.

However, you apparently developed blood clots in both arms that caused the clots to move to the lungs, which are called pulmonary emboli. Determining the duration of therapy takes clinical judgment. Because you had clots in your arms rather than your legs, had a pulmonary embolus, and have FVL, some experts would treat you for the rest of your lifetime.

I wouldn't say that Eliquis has severe side effects. Because it reduces blood-clotting, there is a chance of bleeding. For most people with a low to average risk of bleeding, the likelihood is on the order of 1% to 2% per year. If the risk of a life-threatening clot is higher than the risk of bleeding, then continued anticoagulation is preferred.

First-timer tells all

Hi Guy,

I have been playing Bingo regularly for about five months now—twice a week so far at a number of different charity games and at a casino in my area.

I started going not long after I came across a copy of this Bingo newspaper in a neighbor's recycle bin while out walking one afternoon.

It was fun to flip through (the paper, not the recycle bin!), and when I saw all the games in the paper's directory, it got me thinking that I should try one of the games.

I went to a small school Bingo near my home and mostly had fun—except for being a little anxious about keeping track of the numbers. But after I went a few more times I got the hang of it and no longer worry about staying with the caller.

It has been enjoyable visiting the different halls in the area, and it gave me a chuckle at how many of the same people I see over and over again, no matter which Bingo I choose. Apparently, like most activities, there is a community of people who seem to be the core of Bingo fans, followed by the semi-regulars who only go to select halls. The jury is still out on which category I will eventually fall into. But I am sure I am not telling you anything you don't already know.

The reason for this letter is to share my excitement about finally winning my first Bingo! Actually, I should say my first two Bingos because I won two jackpots in one night with a triple Bingo followed by a coverall, both on the same card. It was SO exciting!

I have played enough now to know the feeling of being one number away and itching to hear that number called—until someone else's is called first. This was exactly the same, until I saw my number pop up on the monitor.

My jaw dropped, I could hardly swallow, it seemed like an hour before the caller finally said the number out loud. I called Bingo so loud it made the people sitting around me jump in their chairs. When I told them it was my first ever Bingo, they applauded.

When the last number for my coverall came up, I was a little calmer, but not much. And when I called Bingo the second time, the people around me were a LOT less enthusiastic about my win—which made me feel like I fit right in.

I am so very happy to now be able to say that I'm not just a Bingo player—I am a Bingo WINNER! I cannot wait for it to happen again. — Brad L., Cicero, NY, via email

Hi Brad,

Well congratulations, and welcome to the winners' circle!

Most Bingo players remember their first Bingo win. For lots of us, it was playing as kids, perhaps at a birthday party, and winning candy or a small, treasured prize. Others were a bit older and were thrilled to discover that you could actually win money by playing this "kids' game" with adults. Still others, like yourself, came back to Bingo many years later, gave it a fresh look, and rediscovered the fun of competing with a community of fellow Bingo fans, coming close to winning time and time again, but just missing, and then experiencing the joy of finally beating the crowd and taking home that big juicy jackpot.

Whether you're in a dimly lit church basement or a flashy casino game room, getting Bingo is equally thrilling. Here's hoping there are many more Bingos in your future. — Guy

Veterans Post

The OIG always comes through

Things are going to be different in 2025. If there's one thing I hope, it's that the Veterans Affairs Office of Inspector General isn't hit with any budget or staffing reductions. As time goes on we need them more than ever to dig out, investigate and expose all the problems in the VA.

The PACT Act of 2022, for example, required screenings for toxic exposures — as well as training for the VA medical staff to do those screenings. Within a short time, screenings had been done on 4 million veterans out of the 9 million who were enrolled in VA health care. That's approximately 45% of the total. Training for staff, however, didn't come close. When additional training was required, only 21.4% of staff completed it, which means that a lot of veterans were screened by staff who hadn't done all of their training.

Then there is the matter of communication that the VA OIG exposed: A "package manager" computer program at the VA bundles up the documents for a veteran's claims and then sends them off to a printer. The VA OIG discovered that, because nobody was paying attention to the problem, over 2 million packages weren't printed ... because nobody hit the "send" button. The veterans, therefore, did not receive the communications from the VA, which might have been asking for more evidence for a claim to be processed or notification about a claim decision and information about options for responding to that decision.

Keep your fingers crossed. In a perfect world, the VA OIG will maintain an adequate budget and staffing. Doubling it would be better.

Lucky Days: 22 - 26
Lucky Numbers: 48 - 59

CAPRICORN (DEC 22-JAN 20): Friction arises from outside your influence and control now. This can feel maddening for a sign like yours that prefers control over serendipity. But ask yourself if you are imagining those barriers. A part of your nature might want a 'time out' this month. Don't ignore its message.
Lucky Days: 8 - 18
Lucky Numbers: 2 - 12

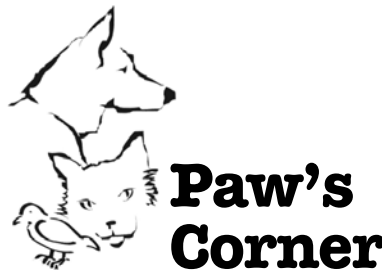

AQUARIUS (JAN 21-FEB 19): The full Moon on the 12th has you revisit an agreement or settlement you assumed was completed. See if you have missed some vital puzzle pieces—a riddle that's commanded your attention since the start of the new year. You'll be surprised with what you discover.

One side of the equation is focused on down-to-earth concerns, while the other is tugging you into new terrains of your imagination. No blame should you prefer one approach over the other but do aim for balance.
Lucky Days: 7 - 17

- If you are serving hot rolls on a buffet, line the basket with aluminum foil before you line it with a towel. They lose heat less quickly that way.
- "I've loved this little trick since I saw it used at a party years ago. I serve iced tea (or punch) at most of my get-togethers, and instead of ice cubes, I freeze several pounds of cleaned, destemmed white grapes. They are a hit at every party." — M.A. in New York

DEAR PAWS: I inherited my aunt's cat, "Tabitha," late last year. When Tabbi came to live with me, I noticed that she had six toes, but only on one paw. Her other front paw was normal. I thought that was unusual but not dangerous, or my aunt would have done something about it. However, on our first visit to the veterinarian, when I pointed out the toe as a strange genetic anomaly, the vet got very concerned. The "toe" was actually a lump! Tabbi had surgery to remove it. Fortunately, it was benign, and she recovered completely. Please tell your readers to contact the vet when they notice any strange growth. — Joe in Portland, Oregon

DEAR JOE: Thank you for sharing your story! Cats, dogs and other pets can develop strange growths or lumps during their lifetime. It's not always easy to determine whether a growth is harmless or needs to be removed. The vet will do a needle biopsy and can often examine the cells under a microscope right in their office. Having new lumps and bumps checked out as soon as possible is important, because the vet can treat them while they're still small, so your pet suffers less pain and discomfort. If a mass turns out to be cancerous, the faster the treatment happens, the better.

So, just as a change in behavior or energy signals that it's time to visit the vet, a new lump or bump (or any strange new growth) should be checked out as soon as possible.

How would you handle a similar situation? Tell us about it at ask@pawscorner.com.

- Need almost-instant party snacks? Try a package of store-bought cheese tortellini. Cook according to package instructions (usually only a few minutes), toss with oil or salad dressing and stick each on a toothpick.

- "A great way to make things comfortable for guests is to print out a copy of the channel lineup for your cable service provider. You also can print out common remote control buttons or any remote-control or TV instructions for streaming movies, etc. This helps us older folks enjoy a few hours of TV time while the younger kids are out at work or school." — H.P. in Nebraska

- At parties, try this tip to avoid overeating: Keep a drink in your dominant hand. You'll be less likely to graze on high-fat chips and other snack foods. Need a little something? Hope for a veggie platter. But whether it's veggies or chips, grab a couple then WALK AWAY from the table before you can hit the dip.

Dear Aunt Bingo

Bad mood Bingo

Dear Aunt Bingo,

I am not sure you will print this letter; however I am hoping.

There is a Bingo hall where I live that could be a wonderful place to play, however, the manager is not a very nice person. The games are good, the payouts are good, and it is in a nice location. You have the option of sitting inside or you can sit in an outdoor patio area.

This manager is rude to the customers and has no problem berating employees in front of everyone. Bingo is one of my favorite things to do. I get to go meet my friends and laugh and joke. It is one of my ways of relaxing. I went to this Bingo hall on Sunday hoping to have fun and visit my friends; however, as soon as I walked in the hall the drama started. A customer was complaining that she couldn't sit where she wanted to sit because someone was saving a seat and that was not fair. Instead of the manager saying I'm sorry let me see what I can do for you, he immediately went into his holier than thou mode and started making the situation worse. The manager insisted that saving seats was not allowed and they would put an end to it.

Now here is the part that really gets me. This same Bingo manager calls other Bingo halls and has them save seats if he is planning on going there to play so that when he decides to get there, he will have a seat.

It amazes me that in this day and age people are still so extremely selfish. It has been brought to several peoples' attention about this person, however no one is willing to deal with it. The Bingo Commission has been made aware of the situation, but because this manager has friends in the commission, things get blamed on the employees that work there.

I am hoping you will print this and readers will see this and if they are not happy about the way they are being treated at a Bingo hall or anywhere, they will feel inclined to do something about it. — One Fed Up Bingo Player

Dear Fed Up,

This manager sounds like quite a hothead. But truthfully, it is not the gaming commission's problem: They exist to enforce laws and keep games on the up-and-up, not to monitor or discipline temperamental managers. As you yourself say, the hall is nice, the games and prizes are good, and that patio feature is awesome. So, you could simply plug in your earbuds, tune out the manager's outbursts, and enjoy the games. Or, you could be bold, and ask for an opportunity to speak to him in private, perhaps with a friend who feels the same as you, and ask politely if he might consider easing up on the attitude in the hall. I can't think of anything else you can do other than quitting and going elsewhere to play. — Aunt Bingo

Ask Annie

Date night dinner

Dear Annie,

I would like to make a romantic dinner for my husband for Valentine's Day. It will be our 40th wedding anniversary. Can you make any suggestions? Also, he loves meat! Please keep most of the recipes simple! — Rosemary J. in Boise, Idaho

Dear Rosemary,

Congratulations on your upcoming anniversary. I would suggest a menu including shrimp cocktail; a fresh salad with sliced beefsteak tomatoes; filet mignon with either a bearnaise sauce (Knorr's packet) or a bottled steak sauce like A-1 (hide the bottle); fresh veggies such as asparagus, brussell sprouts or cauliflower; a twice-baked potato; and a fantastic dessert like an Ice Box Cake. Make the dessert the day before. — Annie

TWICE-BAKED POTATO

- 2 large Idaho potatoes, pre-baked
- Whipping cream
- Butter or margarine
- Salt
- Pepper
- Paprika

Carefully slice the potatoes in half. Remove the pulp, leaving the skins as intact as possible. Mix the potato pulp in a medium size bowl and add the cream, butter, salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly. Fill the four potato shells with the potato mixture. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake for 15 minutes at 350 degrees in a pre-heated oven. Serve immediately.

ICE BOX CAKE

- 2 packages Ladyfingers - separated (unfilled)
- ½ gallon ice cream- allow to thaw for 15-20 minutes (your choice of flavor)
- 3 bars German Sweet Chocolate
- ¼ cup sugar
- 3 eggs (beaten)
- Whipped cream (aerosol can)
- 1 pint fresh strawberries (stems removed and sliced)
- 1 springform cake pan

Line sides and bottom of springform pan with the ladyfingers (leave curved side of pastry facing the pan). Fill any empty spaces with broken pieces. Add softened ice cream carefully to spring form. Place in freezer for at least 30 minutes. Melt 3 bars of German Sweet Chocolate in a double boiler. Remove from the heat. Add sugar and beaten eggs. Pour on top of the ice cream. Return to freezer for at least two hours or overnight. Serve with whipped cream and sliced strawberries. May use 1 or 2 flavors of ice cream.

How to talk to your doctors and get them to listen

Dear Savvy Senior:

How can I get my doctors to listen better? I just turned 78, and over the past few years I feel more and more dismissed by my doctors. I know I can't be the only one who feels this way. Any suggestions? — Dissatisfied Patient

Dear Dissatisfied,

Many older patients feel like their doctors are dismissing their concerns, which can be frustrating and lead to missed diagnoses and delayed care. If you believe your doctor isn't listening to you, here are some tips offered by the National Institute on Aging that may help.

Prepare for your appointment: Before your exam, make a written prioritized list of any questions and concerns you want to discuss with your doctor, or print any online health research you've gathered, and bring it to your appointment so you won't forget anything. If you're in for a diagnostic visit, you should prepare a detailed description of your symptoms, when they began and what makes them worse.

Be honest and upfront: Even if the topic seems sensitive or embarrassing, it's important to be honest and upfront with your doctor. You may feel uncomfortable talking about memory loss or bowel issues, but these are all important to your health. It's better to be thorough and share detailed information than to be quiet or shy about what you're thinking or feeling. Remember, your doctor is used to talking about all kinds of personal matters.

Ask specific questions: If you and your doctor aren't communicating well, ask specific questions that require a response. For example: What might have caused the problem I'm dealing with? What's the specific name of my diagnosis? Is the problem serious? Will it heal completely or require ongoing management? What future symptoms might suggest you need emergency care or a follow-up visit? When and how will you receive your test results? If you don't understand something, don't hesitate to ask: Can you explain that in simpler terms? Or: Can you give me more details about that?

Take someone with you: Bring along a family member or friend to your appointment. Your companion can help you ask questions or raise concerns that you hadn't considered and listen to what the doctor is telling you and give you support.

Be persistent: If your doctor isn't addressing your questions, repeat them or rephrase them. If you still don't get anywhere, follow up with one of these statements: "I'm worried that we aren't communicating well. Here's why I feel that way." Or: "I need to talk with you about X. I feel like I can't. Can we talk about this?"

After your appointment, if you're uncertain about any instructions or have other questions, call or email your health care provider. Don't wait until your next visit to make sure you understand your diagnosis, treatment plan, or anything else that might affect your health.

For more tips, the National Institute on Aging offers a free booklet called "Talking with Your Doctor: A Guide for Older Adults" that can help you prepare for an appointment and become a better and more informed patient. Visit order.nia.nih.gov/publication/talking-with-your-doctor-a-guide-for-older-adults.

Consider moving on: If you're not making any progress with your doctor and the problem persists, it's probably time to start looking for a new provider. If you're dealing with a serious issue—like a doctor who prescribes the wrong medication or fails to provide test results in a timely manner—it might be appropriate to file a complaint with the state medical board.

Olympian Michael Phelps, F1 racer Carlos Sainz Jr. team to win Poker Golden

In November, the Formula 1 Las Vegas Grand Prix took place in Sin City. In the week leading up to the big race, dozens of events took place throughout Las Vegas. One of them was Global Poker Table Talk at PokerGO Studio.

Ferrari drivers Carlos Sainz Jr. and Charles Leclerc joined 23-time Olympic gold medal winner Michael Phelps and poker pro Antonio Esfandiari for a special team event. Phelps and Sainz Jr. were paired to battle against Esfandiari and Leclerc for "The Golden G.O.A.T", a special goat-themed trophy to determine the "Greatest Of All Time."

It was a unique format where the players were allowed to consult with their teammate during a hand. Each team started with 310,000 in chips to coincide with the 310-kilometer length of the F1 racetrack.

After about an hour, Leclerc and Esfandiari were down 231,000 to the 389,000 of Sainz Jr. and Phelps when a truly epic hand took place. With the blinds at 2,000/4,000, the latter team raised to 8,000 with the A♥7♥ and the former defended holding the K♥9♥.

The 4♥Q♥8♥ flop gave both teams a heart flush draw and Leclerc/Esfandiari led out for 15,000, which Sainz/Phelps called. The 6♥ peeled off on the turn to give both teams a flush and it seemed destined a game-ending crash was coming.

Leclerc/Esfandiari bet 20,000 with the second-nut flush and Sainz/Phelps just called with the nut flush. When the J♠ completed the board on the river, Leclerc/Esfandiari bet 70,000 and left themselves 120,000 behind. Sainz/Phelps paused for a bit before Sainz announced, "All in."

Leclerc/Esfandiari quickly called off only to see their opponents roll over the nut flush, the one hand that could beat them.

"You've got to be kidding me," Esfandiari exclaimed. "That's so sick. That never happens by the way."

It was the ultimate cooler, which is the term in poker for a hand where, according to Up Swing Poker, a player holds a very strong hand, but loses to an even stronger hand and often loses the maximum amount of chips.

"It was awesome watching Carlos kind of get into his comfort zone," Phelps told media outlet PokerNews after the victory. "Obviously it's different playing on TV and playing with Antonio [Esfandiari]. It can be intimidating for a lot of people. But he kind of got in his comfort zone."

Congratulations to Michael Phelps and Carlos Sainz Jr. on winning the Global Poker Table Talk Vegas and for capturing the Golden G.O.A.T. trophy! As for the two F1 racers, they did well in the Las Vegas Grand Prix with Sainz Jr. finishing in third place while Leclerc was right behind in fourth place.

What's New in Nevada

New attraction announced

Details are sparse, but a new attraction called "Interstellar Arc" has been announced for Area 15, just as construction commences on the 20,000-square-foot venue slated to open next fall. According to the press release, Interstellar Arc will "transport guests to the 26th century, where they will take on a deep space mission." The attraction is being designed by Montreal-based Felix & Paul Studios, a virtual reality company, which has earned five Canadian Screen Awards, two Primetime Emmy Awards, and a Daytime Emmy for its many VR experiences and TV programs.

Two upscale bars open on the Strip

Golden Gai Cocktail Club has opened at the Venetian. According to the press release, the bar "draws on the spirit of the neon-lighted blocks of the Golden Gai district in the Shinjuku ward of Tokyo, where hundreds of bars, clubs, and dining spots populate narrow alleys and passageways." It's located inside Wakuda, so you can order off the menu to pair with premium Japanese sakes and whiskeys. Joining Golden Cai is Caspian's Cocktails and Caviar, which debuts at Caesars Palace later this month. It's described as a "hidden live-music venue," which makes sense, given that it occupies the space formerly Cleopatra's Barge.

Second largest In N Out Burger

In N Out has confirmed that it will open a "retro" outlet at the BLVD shopping complex on the Strip across from Aria. The restaurant space will be more than 8,000 square feet, smaller than only the largest location in Barstow, with a large outdoor patio overlooking the Strip. In addition, merchandise will be sold in conjunction with the burgers at a "unique company store."

Havana 1957 opening at Flamingo

The good folks at VegasChanges.com posted some photos of the new restaurant at the Flamingo, Havana 1957. The construction walls have been removed and the space formerly occupied by the Tropical Breeze Cafe is just about ready for Cuban food. Havana 1957 has five locations in south Florida and this one will be the first beyond those. The big online menu for the Miami locations shows appetizers such as a tamal, empanada, yucca fries, and masitas (fried pork), ceviche, burgers and a Cubano, and soups and salads; entrees include chicken, pork, flank and skirt steak, shrimp, salmon, and seafood stew, prepared with either Cuban mojo (citrus-onion sauce) or criolla (tomato sauce), along with a whole fried snapper, grilled lobster tail and shrimp, and surf and turf.
