Words ...Alive! will dramatize the works of three outstanding humorists. Erma Bombeck, Wendy Wasserstein, and Nora Ephron speak for several generations of women who experienced both immense changes in cultural and social mores. These writers' insights documented the plight of ordinary women finding their way in an ever-changing landscape. In a fictional conversation between them, you will hear segments of their writings which will make you laugh, remember and rejoice.

A Place of Hope Outreach (The Chapstick Program)

The next chapstick outreach will be on Saturday, April 13th, with training on April 11 at the Place of Hope, Rinker Campus in Boca, at 2:00 pm.

We will meet at Starbucks (corner of Congress and Yamato) at 1:15 pm. The future dates are: May 18, June 22, and July 21st, so plan to join us, but remember, you must be trained first.

Recent note from Laura Cusack, the Human Trafficking Prevention and Education Coordinator of The Place of Hope included the information that at the West Palm Outreach, we received THREE tips on missing children! Two different hotels across town recognized the same girl. Another girl tried to get a room at one of our hotels but was turned away due to her having no ID. All of these tips have been passed on to law enforcement.

We are so thankful for each and every one of you who come out each month to look for these kids! See you at the next outreach I hope.

Washington Institute 2019

Join us in Washington on April 7-9, 2019.

Registration is now open for the 2019 Washington Institute. The Institute starts with speakers, panels, and workshops on issues, advocacy skills, leadership, and policy, preparing you for a day of visits to your members of Congress. Appointments with your Senators and Representatives will be scheduled.

To register, go to www.NCJW.org and follow the Washington Institute link. SE Atlantic Section may reimburse a portion of the cost. Questions? Contact Arlene Davidson at: amdavidson01@gmail.com or Penny Gelb at pgelb@comcast.net.

All who have attended in other years have found this to be an unforgettable experience.

Three Ways to Get Involved With Advocacy

Are you passionate about gun safety? Get in touch with Rosalie Almborg (Roasted@bellsouth.net) and volunteer. She has two programs that need help. One involves distribution of free gun locks to gun owners. The other effort is collecting signatures on petitions to put an amendment banning assault weapons on the Florida ballot in 2020.

Did you help pass Amendment 4 in the last election, giving the right to vote back to felons who served their time? If so there are opportunities now to help them become registered voters. If you want to get involved, contact Debbie Sacks (ricksacks@gmail.com). She will let you know what you can do.

Do you want to help stop teen trafficking? Get in touch with Arlene Davidson (amdavidson01@gmail.com)

NCJW Lobby Days in Tallahassee March 11-13

NCJW members from throughout Florida, including SE Atlantic and Palm Beach Sections, as well as from Miami, Sarasota-Manatee, Tallahassee and Jacksonville convened in Tallahassee in March to. We visited our legislators to advocate for our positions on several areas of interest, including gun safety, reproductive rights, human trafficking and hate crimes. We briefed our local representatives about our take on pending legislation, and met as a group with Commissioner of Agriculture Nikki Fried. While NCJW supports some bills, there are a number that we oppose, such as laws that would arm classroom teachers and restrict a woman's right to choose. While in Tallahassee, we also provided information to legislators about NCJW advocacy projects and received very positive feedback about programs such as chapstick distribution and teen trafficking posters. All members need too keep informed about what is happening in Tallahassee. Call your State Senator or Representative to let them know what you think.

As VP for Advocacy of SE Atlantic, I hope we will continue to meet with and work with our legislators in district on an ongoing basis. If you are interested in participating, you are very welcome! Just let me know.

NCJW National Announces New CEO

WASHINGTON – The National Council of Jewish Women (NCJW) announced today that it has hired Sheila Katz as its new CEO to lead the organization into the future and build on its 125-year legacy of turning progressive ideals into action. Katz will join NCJW this summer after 12 years with Hillel International, where she was named the youngest-ever vice president in the organization's history.

"Now more than ever, in today's polarized political climate, we need a feminist movement rooted in Jewish values that will improve the quality of life for women, children, and families," said Beatrice Kahn, NCJW board president. "Through her deep experience giving a voice to young activists and developing innovative approaches to critical problems in the Jewish community, Sheila has her finger on the pulse of today's women's movement and will enable us to move our advocacy work forward in Washington, D.C. and across the country." With her proven track record of community organizing, digital engagement, and coalition-building, Katz will work alongside NCJW's 90,000 members and supporters nationwide to advance its signature advocacy initiatives ensuring a fair and independent judiciary, reproductive freedom, civic engagement, and empowering women across Israel.

"I am honored and proud to take the helm of NCJW and help write the next chapter in its history," said Katz. "There is no other organization in the country like NCJW – one that harnesses the power and voices of Jewish feminists isn't afraid to challenge the status quo and creates positive social change that makes a real difference in the lives of millions of people every day."

Meet our Jewish Leader of Tomorrow Scholarship Winner

Carson Abt is the 2019 NCJW Scholarship recipient. She is a senior at Marjory Stoneman Douglas HS and will be attending Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania in the fall. This is her award winning essay:

Learn not to be afraid. It's a song I sing aloud every week at my March of the Living classes but one I mentally sing to myself every day. It gives me the courage to conquer the world instead of being afraid of it.

My leadership in Judaism started when I created a library at my Temple Hebrew school. After my Bat Mitzvah, I was invited to lead Friday night services due to my high level of enthusiasm while cantoring and scholarship while reciting the prayers. I am continuing my Jewish education throughout March of the Living, where I am traveling to Poland and Israel in April and May to visit Polish concentration camps for one week and then Israel for a second week to celebrate its Independence Day.

I exhibit leadership in my high school as president of my school's 700 member DECA chapter. DECA is an organization that teaches emerging leaders and entrepreneurs about business management, hospitality, finance and marketing. Marjory Stoneman Douglas' DECA chapter is the 5th largest in the world. Two years ago I started DECA in the Middle, a club that meets twice a month to teach middle school students skills they'll need in life in a fun manner.

Like the Jewish people and the NCJW, I've learned the importance of standing up for your beliefs as one voice can make a difference. NCJW advocates for women, I advocate for children, specifically students and safety precautions in school. In February 2018, there was an active shooter in my school who killed 17 students and staff. Soon after the tragedy I had another idea. Instead of thinking about what went wrong, I thought about what we did correctly that prevented additional deaths, specifically how my teachers knew the protocols on how to react to an active shooter on campus.

At the White House Listening Session, which took place one week after the shooting, I presented my idea to President Trump, Vice President Pence, and Secretary of Education DeVos. I lobbied each of them about the large percentage of schools that do not have active shooter protocols and what steps the Federal Government could take. I also wrote an article for the New York Times titled "My Teachers at Marjory Stoneman Douglas Saved lives" summarizing the statistics found and my personal experiences. Then in December 2018 I was invited back to the White House to present the President with the federal school commission Final Report with possible solutions to strengthen school safety, including my solution of emergency preparedness drills.

With my knowledge of Judaism throughout continuous education, my passion for leadership roles, my drive to make a difference, and my courage to face my fears, I have the potential to be a future Jewish leader of tomorrow.

Thank you to the committee for their time in reading all of our applications,

Ellen Hahn
