Sacred Vessels (Part Two)

Reprobated is any practice of using for the celebration of Mass common vessels, or others lacking in quality, or devoid of all artistic merit or which are mere containers, as also other vessels made from glass, earthenware, clay, or other materials that break easily. At the same time any use in place of the sacred vessels of containers such as simple baskets or other receptacles meant for ordinary use outside the sacred celebration is strictly forbidden.

Before they are used, sacred vessels are to be blessed by a priest according to the rites laid down in the liturgical books. It is praiseworthy for the blessing to be given by the Archbishop, who will judge whether the vessels are worthy of the use to which they are destined.

It is a praiseworthy practice to cover the chalice with a veil, which may be either the color of the day or white.

When several chalices are to be used, it is praiseworthy, by reason of the sign value, to use a main chalice of larger dimensions, together with smaller chalices.

To avoid any danger of spilling the Precious Blood, during the consecration flagons, bowls, or other vessels not fully in accord with the established norms are never to be used. The wine to be consecrated may, however, be brought forward in a dignified flagon, decanter or similar vessel and then poured into the chalice(s) at the preparation of gifts.

The pouring of the Blood of Christ after the consecration from one vessel to another is completely to be avoided, lest anything should happen that would be to the detriment of so great a mystery.

It is preferred in the Archdiocese of Portland that the bread and wine to be consecrated are done so in the vessels from which they will be distributed. This avoids the awkward division of the consecrated species into other vessels before the Communion Rite. This also avoids unduly prolonging the preparation of the altar.
