

Providing The Living Water

...Sharing Jesus July, 2014

Eleven preachers from the Kutui District congregations gathered together as they do each month to spend time in prayer, singing, and Bible study. Team member Steve Collins shared a lesson on elders and deacons. Each preacher gave a congregational report. U.S. preachers Dick Miller and Ryan Miller conducted a “preacher to preacher” section of the meeting where they shared their thoughts about preaching and encouraging one another.

East African World Bible School Coordinator Phil Palmer spoke to the group about World Bible School and the process of signing people up for the Bible correspondence program. Jeremy Mutinda, one of the preachers, was converted through WBS and agreed to serve as the area WBS coordinator.

Over the next several days visits to congregations and village markets were held to sing, share the Gospel, and sign up interested people for Bible studies. The team held Gospel meetings and WBS sign-ups at Kavonge, Mwangya, Kithumula, Nzawa. Masaani, Kivaki, Kavaani, Ngelani, and Kiunduani.

During the visits the team began the distribution of 150 Bibles that Caring for Kenya had purchased.

In addition to the congregational meetings the team visited church families, market places, and water kiosks to build relationships. Our team visited the Caring for Kenya mission center under construction. It will provide a place for larger mission teams to stay on future visits. The team also visited the sustainable agriculture demonstration farm. The farm has 56 drip irrigated raised planting beds and a chicken house with 500 chickens. The team also visited Celestine's medical clinic to provide medical supplies and water filters.

On the trip back to Nairobi the team visited with Healing Hands international African Agriculture Director Ebenezer Udofia and his family. The team also visited the Nairobi Great Commission School and the Institute of Practical Christian Ministry (IPCM) to see water and agriculture work. Teaching preachers how to raise their own food provides an outreach tool as they build relationships and creates opportunities to share the Gospel.

The new water well at IPCM has created a clean water source for the community, built relationships, and created a way to share God's love in action.
