Playwright Anthony E. Gallo whose large portfolio mainly consists of mostly historical dramas, tries his hand at the theater of the absurd- a form of humor predicated on deliberate violations of causal reasoning, producing events and behaviors that are obviously illogical.

Heathcliff (yes, that one) has become the world's richest and most powerful man and now lives mostly in America. He is a trillionaire. He loves his 48-bedroom cottage (Thrushmont Grange) in Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, one of nearly forty homes he owns around the world. The well protected cottage has twenty servants, and of course his trusted butler, Hindley but he is more than just a servant, and they both share a dead wife. Mr. Heathcliff's great joy is wife Cathy, who although dead many years, is still with him although he has been married four times. Germany, Japan, France, and China, and the Pope as pests. He hires a special assistant, one humble Nellie Smith who is also on a spiritual journey, as a personal assistant. Wait till you find out about her. Oh well. And then the fireworks begin. A distant biological cousin, a guru a complicated and
