Woody Bradshaw went to New York and the very first audition he did, he didn't get that part, but they wrote another part for him. Now he's more interested in music. I don't even like Country, but I love his work. And he was so much fun! I have never had a guest flirt with me so outrageously. <http://bit.ly/1bgc1eF>

Ron Klein is the guy who invented the magnetic strip on the back of credit cards. What I am more impressed with about him, though, is that he was Florida Senior Athlete of the year. Somebody would have invented that strip eventually because it was needed. But the athlete part... <http://bit.ly/1kh1g8p>

Dan Vega is the über-entrepreneur. I say "the" because I don't not know of anyone else who starts 3-4 businesses a month, partnering with others. This man knows business. <http://bit.ly/100fqbH>

Dr. Robert Fischell. If you were a cardiac surgeon, you've built shrines to this guy. It's a safe bet that you or someone you know owes their life to him. He also sings, writes, draws, designs, ... And really fun guy. <http://bit.ly/1Hf7APv>

Shellie Hunt Until Woody, this was my favorite interview. Shellie grew up under a house, next to the water heater. (No joke.) She is now a highly-successful entrepreneur who focuses on empowering women around the world. (She's first up on my demo.) <http://bit.ly/14fOHRQ>
