R.E.VIEW

Vol. 6 No. 3 ~ Autumn 2021

Just as a model horse represents the real thing, frozen in the moment, a photo of a model horse is something timeless...although some cropping might be needed at times! Here, Sunshine's P.O. Plenty, a Breyer Hanoverian customized by Sue Rowe in the 1980s and owned by photographer Ardith Carlton, shows his heels to some stray fingers while outside in Tochigi Prefecture, Japan.

submissions to their artists' folders, and expect we will be nowhere near ready to massage this huge project into book form by this December. So we have extended the deadline to December 31, 2022, and will concentrate on catching up on moving photos to artists' folders early next year to help make this an amazing online reference resource.

And then, of course, there's the Vintage Custom Model Equine Center and Museum itself, including the Model Animal Hobby History Archive. Life has to come first for us for now, but we're finally getting where we need to go, and are looking forward to being able to get into gear at last to make it a reality!

Five years ago, on a steamy August night a lot like this one, I pecked out the first "Word to the Fore" for the very first issue of VCMEC Model Horse Re-View.

It was "just the latest night of imagining the opening of the Vintage Custom Model Equine Center Hobby House & Museum, and looking forward to looking back on how it happened," I wrote, between pauses to towel off the sweat trickling down my wrists. Summers in Japan were brutal. We had three more of them ahead.

But time flows on, and now we're in our second summer in the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex. The heat here is just as extreme--but it's outside. Inside, there's plenty of air conditioning in this spacious spare bedroom/office. My brother has been sharing his home and taking wonderful care of us as we've gotten back on our feet in the U.S. after nearly two decades of life in Japan.

Four days from now, though, a new adventure will begin as we drive from northern Texas to the Northwoods of Wisconsin. There, I'll be working as a reporter, photographer, and graphic designer for the Iron County Miner weekly newspaper, now in its 137th year! (My dad was a newspaperman in Michigan, and community journalism was his passion. This year is the 25th anniversary of his passing, and I'll do my darndest to do him proud.)

At this point it's hard to gauge how different life is going to become--but with me facing a two-hour round-trip commute each weekday and graphics programs to learn, on top of Corky and I unpacking our household after years in storage, our time is going to be tied up for a while. We're sorry to make this announcement, but believe it's for the best, and hope you'll understand:

The VCMEC Model Horse Re-View is going on hiatus.

We aim for the Re-View to return with the Summer 2022 issue next June, featuring the final aggregate results of the VCMEC 2020-21 Online World Championships. (Results of the September 2021 fifth leg and December 2021 sixth leg will be emailed directly to entrants.) By that time we should also know whether a 2022-23 edition of the series will be possible.

For the Vintage Custom Census, our Smugmug site <http://vintagecmcensus.smugmug.com> will remain open for submissions. We've got a lot of catching up to do in moving

In the meantime, how 'bout this issue, coming out a full month early! Heartfelt thanks to Daralyn Wallace, our judge for June's Leg 4 of the VCMEC 2020-21 Online World Championships, and Shelly Nelson, who stepped up to help when life threw Daralyn a monster curve after she'd judged all but one of the classes. Shelly judged the '90s Workmanship division's Extreme CM with Hair Mane/Tail Traditional class and selected all the championships and reserves based on Daralyn's placings.

Huge thanks too to Liz Isham Cory for honoring us in her superb "Identifying Your Breyer" presentation (screenshot above!) that was one of the highlights of last month's BreyerFest 2021 online extravaganza! We appreciate it, Liz!

Thanks also to the Model Equine Photo Shows Association for allowing me to dust off and update an article I wrote for the MEPSA Championship book in 2016.

And while we're at it, we salute the Internet Anagram Server for helping us fill page 12 with silliness. Try to read it without laughing, we dare ya! (Apologies to Mr Half Asser, Mars Flash...)

Most of all, thanks to you for your kind thoughts and encouragement on our mission to preserve and promote vintage custom model equines through VCMEC.

We'll be in touch on the VCMEC Facebook page. 'Til next time, please be safe, and stay tuned for more fun to come!

What a (Model Horse Photo-Shootin') Fool Believes

by Ardith Carlton

It was just me, my model horse Outlaw Blues, and the camera between us.

And I was about to do it all wrong.

Sure, there are no rigid rules about shooting model horses in natural settings outdoors, just a flock of factors that can influence how realistic and appealing your photo will be. In 30 years of shooting, though, certain ideas have evolved for me--like when the light is best, where to find locations that complement the illusion of scale, and how to minimize risk to everyone involved.

But when you can only visit your collection in storage for a few hours every other year, and don't yet have a photo of a member of your herd...desperation makes it easy to ditch those ideas, and try whatever it takes to get the shot!

That desperation sent me and Outlaw Blues outside my Ohio storage unit at dusk, to turn my model photography practices upside down. There was no sun to light his eye and bring out his color. I hadn't planned ahead for a way to elevate him toward the sky, so we were both down on the dimly lit pavement of the parking lot. And I was shooting alone, with no spotter to watch the horse and our surroundings as I focused on focusing. It was all that time would allow; the flight back to my job in Japan was scant hours away.

Sprawled flat, trying to focus on Outlaw's eye and then bring the lens level with his shoulder, I noticed the moon peeking over his withers. This could maybe be a neat image after all! I had never seen a show photo shot at dusk, but if I used the flash--normally another personal no-no--could this mostly white horse possibly absorb the glare, and the end result maybe even be showable? I took the shot to see!

And then a dually truck tore around the corner of the storage unit.

+ + + + +

Sprawling on the ground...that went full-circle back to those mid-'80s days of my earliest outdoor model photo sessions, searching for likely locations and then flopping down with a horse to get a quick shot. Hunting for ways to frame the horse with blue sky while keeping it in scale, I found the best results on schoolyards' baseball diamonds (as at left with Crusher Talos, my original-finish Breyer Trakehner) and atop high hills of soil at construction sites. The camera was a Nikkormat EL 35mm SLR--split-image manual focus, match-needle exposure control, 24 or 36 shots to the roll of film...ah, those dinosaur days!

Things got a lot less guerrilla when I moved to Columbus, Ohio, to join the staff of Hoof Beats magazine. Three blocks away was Wheeler

Park, with a concrete picnic table on a grassy rise, a lovely expanse of sky, and the sun at your back in the afternoon. Just scatter kitty litter or vermiculite (hey, it seemed like a good idea at the time...) on the tabletop for the horse's footing, and then take a seat to shoot!

At left is Thunder In Paradise, a now-vintage custom by Judy Renee Pope, photoed one spring afternoon at Wheeler Park.

With so much depending on the weather's whim, though, an indoor set got cobbled together at home for photos in a pinch. Horses stood on a plywood footing board covered with powdery model railroad diorama soil, atop a drop-leaf dining table pushed up against a wall, with photo lights in reflective cones clamped onto each table corner. A royal blue Qiana backdrop was push-pinned to the wall, fronted by a two-by-four transformed into a white brick wall with the help of a mix-your-own-mortar kit.

The controlled environment was especially helpful for haired customs and performance set-ups. It allowed even a horse like Ragnarok Hyoga (upper right), a now-vintage custom by Julie Froelich, to compete in Western Pleasure with his reins and full tail tidy.

I was a model photo-shootin' fool--and who wouldn't be, when it's so convenient? And what a dream situation: At Hoof Beats I worked down the hall from master equine photographer Ed Keys, who shared tips for real horse photography that improved my model photos in a slew of subtle ways.

And yet time flows on, carrying us to unforeseen places. After more than a decade at Hoof Beats, I got the chance to move to Japan in 2000, fulfilling a longtime dream. In 2007 my ol' roomie and collaborator in model-horsing-around, Corky Visminas, made the move too. We each brought some favorite model horses along, and continued to collect here and there--but with model horse showing next to unknown in Japan, that aspect of the hobby joined the list of things we had to live without in this corner of the world (like going to Arby's, eating sweet pickles, and finding women's shoes larger than size 8).

Then the magnitude 9.0 Great East Japan Earthquake struck on March 11, 2011, killing nearly 16,000 people. The days that followed were even more frightening, as meltdowns and explosions rocked the Fukushima nuclear plants two hours north-east of us, food and bottled water and batteries quickly disappeared from stores, and roads became choked with crazy-long lines of waiting cars, hoping to get into gas stations before the day's rationed amount of fuel for sale ran out.

Remembering better days, and envisioning good times ahead, helped Corky and I in that difficult time. The fun we'd both had in model horse showing seemed to boomerang from the past into an appealing distraction for today...and as life incrementally returned to normal, we got reacquainted online with the hobby, marvelling at its 21st-century form, and learned how to get involved from the other side of the world.

We loaded up the car with a Canon EOS Kiss X2 SLR digital camera (also known outside Japan as the Canon EOS 450D or EOS Rebel XSi) with a 55-250mm lens, a 21 x 30-inch foam-core footing board with model diorama grass sheets glued to one side, and a herd of model horses hankering to show, and hit the comeback trail!

The tricky part, as always, was finding a good location. Japan is a land of wires slicing through the sky--telephone wires, electrical wires, overhead wires for trains. An overhead wire--or anything else that defines real-world size--can damage the illusion of scale.

Distance, on the other hand, is a great help for the illusion of scale. If you shoot on the top of a hill or at the edge of a valley, the distance helps prevent the size of anything visible on the far side from contradicting the size of your horse.

To me, the stronger light of mid- to late afternoon brings out a model horse's color better than the softer light of morning (but not too late in the afternoon; light gets a little too yellow then). That makes the ability to shoot toward the east another gotta-have for a location.

Of course, there's also the question of how you feel about the possibility of being seen photographing li'l plastic ponies. Is the location secluded enough that you can take your time shooting there? Or do you not want to risk drawing a crowd? (This doesn't really apply in Japan; heck, as a foreigner, anything I do is automatically eccentric!)

Happily, the industrial park where we worked in Tochigi Prefecture turned out to be a great location, yielding photos like the one at left of Safari Eyes, customized by Carol Williams in 1988, and this issue's cover photo of Sue Rowe vintage creation Sunshine's P.O. Plenty.

Once a vast area of rice paddies stretching to the edge of the Tohoku Expressway, the industrial park was gradually being built on parcels of land artificially elevated by soil that had been piled high, levelled off, and then allowed to settle. At its edge, it sloped steeply down about 20 feet into an expanse of ground that was sometimes grassy, and sometimes cleared for bulldozers and other heavy equipment to maneuver. Beyond that was the expressway, with the sky interrupted only by the scenic foothills of Mt. Mikamo in the background.

first impression than an eye with no highlights. On the model front, a gleam in the eye also adds a spark of life, so I want to make darn sure his eye is lit by the sun. If it's not, I'm not above wetting a finger and dabbing his eye to help catch the sunlight.

If the Canon had a split-image focus, I'd focus manually all the time...but it doesn't, so auto-focus is fine. Full Auto mode, too, and no flash. That frees up a few more brain cells for everything else to consider before snapping the shutter.

With the eye so important, that's where I focus. Once auto-focus has locked onto it, I gently bring the lens level with the horse's shoulder. If he should be a particularly tall horse, I sink a smidge to shoot slightly up at his shoulder; if he's a pony, I rise a tad to shoot slightly down at his shoulder.

A handy stack of pallets was usually waiting near the edge, ready to hold our foamcore footing board well off the ground. The foothills in the background were directly southeast, but the footing board swiveled smoothly on the plastic pallets if we needed to shoot more toward the east.

The slanted angles of those foothills could cause some aesthetic complications. It was difficult to avoid the diagonal shapes behind the horse, but as Ed Keys once told me, the viewer's eye will go to the horse's head first. So that's the first point on my mental checklist when shooting: Surround the horse's head with sky. If that's not possible, are his facial profile and ears in the clear? If not, then at the very least his ears should have sky behind them, to immediately draw the eye to his head. Otherwise, having all his head within the shape of the mountain would subconsciously make the horse seem a little harder to "see."

The foothills were only an issue for a few years--after that, construction in the industrial park hit high gear and gobbled up our photo spot. We luckily found another rare combo of high ground and expanse of fields with no wires in the way, this time closer to home in Gunma Prefecture! We'd bring along a wooden box and set our footing board on top, where it could again be swiveled. I had to crouch or kneel beside the box, rather than be able to stand as at the pallets--but the photos from those ouchy sessions were worth it, like the one below of Wildbeat Irongear, a vintage custom by Carole Hale!

My second mental checkpoint when shooting is again thanks to Ed Keys--who was inducted into the media branch of harness racing's Hall of Fame in 2006, by the way--and applies anywhere you photo your horse: Where the viewer's eye is going first isn't just to the horse's head, but to the horse's own eye. A light in that eye helps the viewer's eye find it faster, and creates a more pleasing

The amount of space in the frame can also influence the optical illusion of the horse's height. The frame is your viewpoint of looking at an average-sized horse. Leaving a little less space than usual between the horse's highest point and the top of the frame makes the horse seem a little taller. Leaving more space than usual up top makes the horse seem a little smaller. This can be fine-tuned with cropping the digital image afterward, but thinking about it in advance helps leave enough space to work with.

Along the same lines is another gold nugget from Ed Keys, who explained that in an action photo, your eye anticipates the horse's movement, looking ahead to where the horse is heading. If you crop an action photo too close to the front of the horse, the result is claustrophobic to the eye. So I'm careful to always leave room for a horse in action to continue to "move," to bring more life to the model and avoid jarring the viewer's anticipation of the motion.

Now it's time to click the shutter--but only thanks to someone else having helped the horse and photographer all along. As spotter, Corky stands just out of the frame, ready to grab tippy horses, smooth down hair manes and tails, swivel the footing board as needed or hold it tightly down if the wind threatens to catch and flip it, or just plain make me stop for a water break when we're shooting in 110-degree heat. There's so much that can happen when shooting outdoors, it really is best to not shoot alone.

The last time I shot alone, that dually truck came around the corner of the storage unit. Tires roared up from behind me, churning a hot gust of dirty air as they passed a few feet to the right, and sped on into the night.

For a few moments, I laid there shaking. I had almost died. Disregarding everything I knew about taking model horse photos had almost gotten me killed.

Never, ever again will I shoot alone, I decided. Never, never, no...after this one.

And snapped one more of Outlaw Blues, to be sure I got the shot!

DANE TYLER BENNINGTON

Morgan stallion ~ CM by Laura Hornick Behning in the late 1970s

1960s/'70s Overall Reserve Champion Breed

Dane Tyler Bennington, chosen to represent customized model horses in Liz Cory's "Identifying Your Breyer" presentation (screenshot above!) at this year's BreyerFest, is back for a fifth Victory Lap! His previous spins in the spotlight were in the Spring 2017, Autumn 2017, Summer 2019, and Winter 2019 issues.

This time, Lois Bennington writes, "I want to thank the judges that think Dane is as nice as I think he is. I love the Justin Morgan mold and the color that Laura Hornick-Behning put on this guy just sets off what a wonderful mold this is."

DARK PHOENIX

Trakehner stallion ~ CM by Beth Peart in 1979

1960s/'70s Overall Reserve Champion Workmanship

Susan Stahl writes, "Oh! Dark Phoenix! Now, THERE'S a story!

"I spotted Dark Phoenix (all decked out in beautifully made hunter tack) on Beth Peart's table at the 1979 Model Horse Congress. Beth was one of those remakers (to use the terminology of the time) that I'd heard people talk about in awe, and I could see why when I saw him sitting there. A Breyer Pacer that was now a cantering hunter? I just had to have him.

"Only one problem...his price tag said $100. That was a princely sum that I didn't have. My mother had come with me that year, and I was able to convince her to lend me the $100. I remember it took me a few months to pay her back, but it was totally worth it. Over the next few years, I took him to several live shows where he did quite well.

"Sometime in the mid-1980s, it happened. He was originally on a base and poised on one hind leg. As careful as I tried to be, his weight caused him to snap off at that pastern. Then two of his other legs came off. I put the pieces carefully away. In the 1990s, my hubby had a go at fixing him; he was able to do a bit, but was not able to do the needed repairs. Again, the pieces were put away in a box.

"Over the years, from time to time, I would pull out the box, survey the damage, and consider just tossing the pieces. Each time, I couldn't bring myself to do it. It was almost as if the horse was whispering to me, 'Wait. My time will come.'

"Fast forward to 2018 and the second VCMEC live show...I learned that Beth Peart was actually going to be there! Dark Phoenix went with me. I asked Beth if she would be able and willing to restore him, and she said, 'Challenge accepted!'

"Beth's skills breathed life back into the pile of broken parts, and Dark Phoenix was alive again! The base has disappeared, but the horse is looking better than ever. I even found his original tack set recently!

"The name, Dark Phoenix, is what I call him now. I could not remember his original name but, given how he rose from the ashes of his former self, the new name seemed to fit perfectly.

"Beth has commented that he is one of the three best sport horses she ever did, and I have to agree with her."

SOLDIER BLUE

Welsh Sec. C stallion ~ CM by Judy Renee Pope in 1985

1980s Overall Champion Breed

Ardith Carlton writes, "Hooray for Soldier Blue! Believe it or not, he began life as a Breyer Classic Quarter Horse Stallion--one with his lower right hind leg gone below the hock, at that!

"He's been a treasured member of the herd since the late 1980s, when Lienna Goreth in Illinois sold Corky and I a quintet of customs by Judy Renee Pope; the rest of the gang is pictured below! On Lienna's saleslist, grey particolor Arabian stallion Crown of Wings was the horse of Corky's dreams, and I was all kinds of crazy for red roan sabino TWH mare Chirin's Bell...and then Lienna offered us three Classics that had been dear to her: Soldier Blue, his lovely black mate Grendel, and the boss mare of the bunch, alert grulla Zona Lee!

"All have shown well for us, but with his presence, strikingly dappled coat (I love so much how Judy did dapples!), and extensive remaking, Soldier Blue has been the brightest in the constellation of stars that Lienna sent our way. We're mighty grateful!"

SUNSHINE'S P.O. PLENTY

Appaloosa stallion~CM by Sue Rowe in the 1980s

1980s Overall Champion Color

Ardith Carlton writes, "It's not often you see a photo shot looking down at a model horse cantering across the kitchen linoleum! But even from that angle, the snazzy Appaloosa in that eBay listing 12 years ago pretty clearly had class...so I took a chance on him, and wound up winning what turned out to be a Sue Rowe creation! Talk about hitting the jackpot--Sue's Appaloosas are the gold standard for that breed in the model world!

"The seller unfortunately didn't know anything about the horse or his history, and neither did anyone else when I ran an ad on the Model Horse Sale Pages website asking if anyone recognized him, so he was in need of a name.

"Sue usually included 'Sunshine' in the name of her Appaloosas. Remembering Sue's legendary hat printed with the phrase (and/or challenge) 'Ask Me About My Plastic Oddities,' I tried coming up with something that would include 'P.O.' for Plastic Oddity. The name of 'Dick Tracy' character B.O. Plenty came right to mind, and an outside photo session later (a shot from it is shown on the cover of this issue, wow!), Sunshine's P.O. Plenty was ready to roll.

"Ever since then, he's shown against customs a fraction of his age in clubs including MEPSA and TOPSA. But the golden oldies gathered in the VCMEC World Championships series are the toughest of 'em all, and I'm so proud of him for eking out this big win!

"P.S. Just last week, I learned at long last that he'd once been owned by Lorraine Kistler, for whom he showed as Sunshine's Deluxe Dial! Hope to learn more about his past life!"

SO HAZY YON

Thoroughbred yearling filly ~ CM by Sue Rowe in 1988

1980s Overall Res. Champion Breed

Ardith Carlton writes, "Thirty years after being created by Sue Rowe, this sweet lass surfaced for sale on eBay. She no longer had an identity.

"Many of the non-Appaloosa horses hailing from Sue's Sojourner Studio have 'So' in their name. With that naming convention in mind, the moment I got an in-person look at the way her coat's beautiful blending captures the hazy transition from bay to grey, I knew her new name: So Hazy Yon.

"HOW PIERCEFUL GROWS THE HAZY YON!
HOW MYRTLE PETAILED THOU!
FOR SPRING HATH SPRUNG THE CYCLOTRON,
HOW HIGH BROWSE THOU, BROWN COW?"

From "Pogo" by Walt Kelly, copyright OGPI

"Walt Kelly was a master of wordplay, and his work first grabbed me in junior high. In re-reading his comic strip 'Pogo,' essays, and poetry throughout the decades since, the flow of life between visits always reveals something new.

"So Hazy Yon is one of a few of my horses in VCMEC with Pogo-related names. Two, Wrang Bo Deedy and Rowrbazl, are named for exclamations made by characters in the strip--and like So Hazy Yon, they've both been lucky enough to make it into Victory Laps: Wrang Bo Deedy in the Winter 2018 issue, and Rowrbazl on the next page!"

MISS SMOKUM ROYAL

Congratulations to Cheryl Monroe on this marvelous mare's winnings!

MEGAZONE EVE

Clydesdale mare ~ CM by Judy Renee Pope in 1987

1980s Overall Reserve Champion Workmanship

Ardith Carlton writes, "I've never bid so desperately on a model horse at auction as I did with Megazone Eve...and that was to own her for the second time!

"This mondo mama has been one of my dearest favorites since 1987, when she was on an auction list from Judy Renee Pope and Paula O'Keefe's Nite Watch Farms, and I was fortunate enough to win her. A year later, cantering bay sabino Clydesdale colt Jodevin, another creation by Judy, joined her side.

"I parted with both in a pinch, and missed them terribly for years. Jodevin eventually resurfaced on eBay in 2008, and I was thrilled to bring him back home! But there was no sign of his dam. Having Jodevin there by his lonesome made me regret all the more having ever let Eve go.

"Then one adrenalin-filled day in 2010, there was Eve on eBay! I wasn't the only person who wanted her; several other folks were gunning for that big sabino beauty, and they blew on past me. Bidding stalled a few days before the auction ended, though, and I hoped hard that come the end, those other bidders might be distracted or have miraculously abandoned the model horse hobby to collect ham sandwiches or something.

"The auction's end time was in the wee hours for me, but I was there for a last, desperate try, with the feeling that it was now or never...and got lucky! I'm so relieved she and Jodevin are back together, and tickled she's doing well in VCMEC!"

ROWRBAZL

Knabstrupper stallion ~ CM by Diane Capwell in 1996

1990s Overall Champion Breed

Ardith Carlton writes, "Back in 2009, in ye olde days of the VintageCMHorse Yahoo group, Linda Schenfelt shared an all-text saleslist from Beth Dickinson. Any horse from Beth's collection was always one you'd want!

"One sounded particularly neat: Cause For Applause, described as a Breyer Morganglanz remade by Diana Capwell to a chestnut leopard Appaloosa stallion on a wooden base. Beth had owned him since 1996, the year of his creation. I asked after him but was too late; Cristine Holt, a great fan of Diane Capwell's work, became his lucky new owner.

"Three years later, Cristine pared down her herd, and this time I was the lucky one! Cause For Applause had sounded neat on paper, but actually getting to see a photo of him in Cristine's sale ad, I was floored by his graceful trot, which Diane had expertly engineered to be airborne!

"When she sent Cause For Applause to me in Japan, Cristine thoughtfully included a paper record of information she'd catalogued from Diane that revealed he'd actually been created as a Knabstrupper, with a photo that showed he originally had a gorgeous long mane. Seeing what had become of it, I couldn't help uttering a Pogo-ism of frustration:

From "Pogo" by Walt Kelly, copyright OGPI

...and Rowrbazl the Knabstrupper he became!

"I'm so happy that Rowrbazl is doing well in VCMEC as the breed he was born to be! Thank you so much!"

BRIMSTONE

Thoroughbred stallion ~ CM by Karon Grieve in the 1990s

1990s Overall Champion Color

Jamie Coughlin writes, "Brimstone is painted by Karon Grieve and is even nicer in person than his photos show. He was a good racehorse. He is still available on my sire list for back breedings as his ID is technically deceased but he lives on there and in photo shows.

"I'll just copy his sire listing:

Sire: Rosae Crucis (Bye Bye Birdie x Romagne Cross, Romagney)

Dam: Mrs. Penny (Great Nephew x Tannarine, *Le Fabuleux)

1987 Dark Bay or Brown Horse. FOALS OF 1995 On. (OPEN TO ALL BREEDS)

G3MSW/CH (25) 8-4-4-4 $445,344.

Champion Older Turf Male, Indian Downs. Promising 2yo, suffered a fracture in his first start at 3 but came back at 4 to become a Stakes Winner. Ran three more seasons winning stakes all three, switched to hurdles at 6 and won at second asking.

Sire is a top model MSW and Leading sire, dam is the real Breeder's Cup Champion and stakes producer. His owner did not persist with his jump career and he hung out at the stud farm until we found him up for sale and added him to our sport horse roster. He should be a great source for both competitive sport horses and racing over jumps.

Brimstone is a Beswick Grundy repainted by Karon Grieve (Scotland)."

SKS MYSTIC AURA

National Show Horse mare ~ CM by Lisa Rivera (Shepard) in 1990

1990s Overall Champion Workmanship

Congratulations to Cheryl Monroe for SKS Mystic Aura's great showing!

This is SKS Mystic Aura's third VCMEC Online World Championships series. In 2016-17 she was Reserve World Champion 1990s National Show Horse, and in 2018-19 she was a two-time World Champion, taking that honor in the 1990s division's National Show Horse and Palomino classes.

This blonde bombshell also excelled at VCMEC Live 2016, winning the 1990s National Show Horse class (below).

The "SKS" prefix in her name stands for Cheryl's Silver Knight Stables.

FENRIS SIR PRIZE

Tennessee Walking Horse gelding ~ CM by Sue Sudekum in 1990

1990s Overall Reserve Champion Breed

Congratulations to Cheryl Monroe on her beautiful gaited gelding's wins!

Fenris Sir Prize was also the World Champion TWH in the 2016-17 VCMEC Online World Championships.

RIO GRANDE

Appaloosa gelding ~ CM by Jeannine Hartrampf Olsen in 1999

1990s Overall Res. Champion Color

Corrie Soboda writes, "Sadly there is not much that I know about Rio Grande.

"Longtime collector Denise Banville invited any members of Region 10 to attend a liquidation sale of her collection of chinas, artist resins, customs and antiques in Fall River, Massachusetts on September 30, 2017. She was moving to Maine I believe and was only taking a few things with her. I switched a shift at work to attend since it was only 10 minutes from me. She had a really amazing collection of chinas, customs and resins.

"When I saw Rio Grande I had to have him. He was tacked up in a vintage Western saddle set. (Which I still own also.) I have no idea who made the saddle or what his previous show name was. I used to own a Rio Rondo QHS-1 resin Appaloosa named PCF Rio that I sold and this guy reminded me so much of him. When I first saw him on the shelf I thought that maybe he was a QHS-1! I named him Rio Grande because of PCF Rio.

"We each had colored strings that we put on models we were interested in buying. I couldn't put my string on this guy fast enough!

"I don't know how long Denise owned him. There was so much going on that day that I didn't think to ask for more information and then I had to run to work for the afternoon and evening. Sadly many of us have lost touch with Denise but last I heard she was doing well in her new home.

"I've attached a picture taken of the shelf he was on with my string on him from the sale. I wish I'd had the funds to take so much more home! Sadly I was still recovering from buying so much at BreyerFest that year and this was a cash/check only sale."
