

Alina Voicu has been on the music faculty of Indian Springs School since 1998. Born in Romania, Voicu moved to the USA in 1993 with her husband, violinist Daniel Szasz. In 1995, she completed her master's degree at Bowling Green State University, and in 2000 she received a doctorate in piano performance from The University of Alabama. Voicu has performed extensively as a soloist and in chamber music concerts in Romania, Austria, Hungary, Italy, and the United States and served on the boards of many professional organizations, including as Vice-president and President of Birmingham Music Teachers Association and Alabama Music Teachers Association. Voicu is the founder and director of Indian Springs Piano Competition, a contest which has been open to talented high-school pianists since 1998. She and her husband are the proud parents of Alex, 20 and Angela, 19.
