

FILEY : Here is a closer view of the headland. The resistant beds of Corallian Limestone are seen at the base of the cliff forming a steep profile. In front of the cliff is the wave cut platform, again composed of the limestone. Above this the weaker boulder clay is easily affected by weathering and sub-aerial processes like gulying, landslips and mudflow, and forms a gentler slope.

