

Good morning.

Glass half full.....it IS a good morning since you are able to read this.

The news yesterday about Kobe Bryant and his daughter Gianna is sad to say the least. Kobe is a home-grown Philly kid who became a GREAT ambassador for the entire sport of basketball. He was probably the biggest supporter of girls/women's hoops that any male athlete could be. He was PROUD to be the father of daughters and promoted the girls game day-in and day-out. He really had life in perspective with his family and taught them life lessons.

Take a look at this interview.

Kobe was PROUD of his kids....proud of whatever they became, basketball or not. There are MANY great Kobe interviews and documentaries out there.....maybe take time to look one up at some point today.

On a day that many of us aren't best on and don't like much - a Monday – be thankful on this Monday that we have the privilege enjoy it. Take a little time today to say something a little extra special to the loved ones in your life since we just never know.

Enjoy today and don't take today for granted.
