

In a nutshell we are long term missionaries assigned to the Latin America and Caribbean region of the world but our ministry and its tools have impact and placement on a global scale.

We call our ministry MergeLane Media, where we "merge truth and technology to transform lives". Our hearts are focused on impacting the Digital Native population of the world. (Translate that to working to reach the generation who doesn't know a world without the Internet.) We build resources for Bible schools who are reaching out to non-residential students so that the bi-vocational pastor and others can go to school and prepare themselves for ministry. Our work has taken us to 80 plus countries. We built media facilities in Siberia, Africa, Latin America and Asia. We host online learning platforms for APTS in Baguio in the Philippines, for 4 schools in Latin America and soon to be in Africa. We provide the same services to every regional office of the AGWM. We host the training platform for the AGWM missionary training for all of the AGWM missionaries around the world. We have built each of these platforms and trained the teams on how to use and maintain them.

Our singular most exciting opportunities are ahead of us. We decided a couple of years ago to address the most pressing issue in training remotely. That is to say that we want to reach beyond the end of the internet and offer tools for evangelism and training to places that are served only by cellphone signals. There are about 8 Billion cell phones in service in the world. Which is greater than the total population of our world. We have created what we call: eBridge wireless hubs that create a local wifi hub that allows, without electricity, a battery powered internet hub to be accessed by cellphones, Ipads, and other android devices. Classrooms are powered by our eBridge LC (learning center) tool and evangelism is taking place using our eBridge MC (media center). We have requests from China and Africa rolling in for these devices so that we can help those who have limited freedoms to share their faith with the use of these tools. For $500.00 each we supply these learning and media center tools to those that are asking.

My wife and I have two daughters, Heather and Amanda. Heather has 6 children and Amanda is a special needs child. She, Amanda, has currently developed a malady that is literally taking her life. She has lost so much weight, think down to 89 pounds, that her health is compromised. We desperately need prayers for her.
