Designer Viruses Plus EMR- (A Continuation)

In the January-February, 1994 issue of the Intelligence Newsletter, we showed how the United States Government was very selective in its pursuit of war crimes following WWII. It was shown that, with respect to bacteriological and chemical warfare (BCR and CW), we not only excused the Japanese military and scientists for their "crimes against humanity" but following the war we made use of their expertise for other purposes. Nations have always made use of scientific discoveries captured from enemies during wartime.

Around 750 B.C. King Uzziah of the ten northern tribes of Israel used his brilliant men, now called scientists and engineers, to develop unusual war machines. In II Chronicles, chapter 26, we read:

"And Uzziah prepared for them throughout all the host shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and slings to cast stones. And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by cunning men, to be on the towers and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal. And his name spread far abroad; for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong." (II Chron. 26:14-15). Those "engines" were to become the famous catapults, later to be used by all of the armies of the known world.

But if those inventions and discoveries are used by a nation's government for evil, even against the people of the nation itself, then God comes down hard against that government. This is particularly so when the government believes that it can determine what is right and wrong, and otherwise usurp the role of the spiritual leaders. Again, in II Chronicles, chapter 26:

"But when he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction: for he transgressed against the Lord his God, and went into the temple of the Lord to burn incense upon the altar of incense. And Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the Lord, that were valiant men: And they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the Lord, but to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thine honour from the Lord God."

"Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense: and while he was wroth with the priests, the leprosy even rose up in his forehead before the priests in the house of the Lord, from beside the incense altar" (II Chron. 26:16-19).

The government of our once- respected nation has become self centered, self-serving and evil. It doesn't make any difference whether it is a Republican or Democratic controlled government. It has become a "good-ole-boy" network whose primary function is to drive toward a "new age", which is envisioned in different ways but all with the same goal.

All members of Congress, as well as the Supreme Court, vote in accordance with their "religion," whether they believe in God or not. It is their god, in whatever form they choose, that determines their morals and customs. They vote "yes" or "no" on every issue, depending on the teachings of their god.

It was shown in the January-February, 1994 issue that a consortium of our leaders in all three branches (Executive, Legislative and Judicial) and to include members of the bureaucracy such as CIA, FBI, DOD, State Dept., etc., gather together in some strange form of religion. That consortium is made up of Judeo-Christians, Jews, New-Age advocates and Athiests. It would appear that each of the four groups making up the consortium are members because they feel that it is a benefit to their own belief. Through the years this consortium has come to consider itself the "true believers" or the "chosen ones." These terms are not to be confused with any Biblical terms because the consortium has worked closely with and made agreements with organized crime, homosexuals and psychopaths. It is unimaginable that God would have sanctioned the use of His terms under such an arrangement.

The end result has been the development of a substantial group within the government that has used the scientific techniques developed ostensibly for national defense against our nation's own citizens and citizens of other nations.

We discussed only the chemical and bacteriological aspects in the January-February issue. The examples of such activity are numerous. Substantial proof has been revealed by many researchers that chemical, nuclear, and bacteriological substances have been intentionally released among American citizens. Many instances have been with no punitive reasons involved, rather only to develop the techniques and to determine if the American people will agree with such misuse. But in such cases as the release of CS powder (an internationally illegal compound) in the Waco Branch Davidian complex, the rationale for such use takes it a step further.

For their own reasons, the "true believers" have attempted to develop drugs which would provide a method for mind control over any desired subject, whether it be an individual, a group, or the entire nation. We have reported in the past on the use of floride in the nation's water supplies as a form of mind control in that it has been proven (the proof is available) that the substance makes a person lethargic when taken in small quantities over a long period of time. But that is a shotgun approach. What drugs could be used to be more specific in targeting individuals and groups?

The prisons of America have provided the guinea pigs. In an excellent series of articles by investigative reporters of the Napa Sentinel, in California, it was shown that there was indeed a concerted effort to develop mind control drugs. It was shown that the following organizations were involved in the experiments: U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Department, the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Central Intelligence Agency through the Phoenix Program, the Stanford Research Institute, the Agency for International Development, the Department of Defense, the Department of Labor, the National Institute of Mental Health, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, and the National Science Foundation. According to the reports of these investigative journalists, here are a few experiments used in the mind control program:

"A naked inmate is strapped down on a board, His wrists and ankles are cuffed to the board and his head is rigidly held in place by a strap around his neck and a helmet on his head. He is left in a darkened cell, unable to remove his body wastes. When a meal is delivered, one wrist is unlocked so he could feel around in the dark for his food and attempt to pour liquid down his throat without being able to lift his head."

"Another experiment involves a muscle relaxant. Within 30 to 40 seconds paralysis begins to invade the small muscles of the fingers, toes, and eyes and then the inter costal muscles and diaphragm. The heart slows down to about 60 beats per minute. This condition, together with respiratory arrests, sets in for as long as two to five minutes before the drug begins to wear off. The individual remains fully conscious and is gasping for breath. It is ` likened to dying, it is almost like drowning ` the experiment states."

"Another drug induces vomiting and was administered to prisoners who didn't get up on time or caught swearing or lying, or even not greeting their guards formally. The treatment brings about uncontrolled vomiting that lasts from 15 minutes to an hour, accompanied by a temporary cardio vascular effect involving changes in the blood pressure."

"Another deals with creating body rigidity, aching restlessness, blurred vision, severe muscular pain, trembling and fogged cognition." The Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the U.S. Army have admitted to mind control experiments and that many deaths have occurred, according to the investigators.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) funded experimentation on what is called psychosurgery, again for the purpose of changing or controlling behaviour and/or emotions. This technique utilized either the physical removal of certain areas of the brain by inserting wire up through the nose of the victim or by chemicals.

Dr. Jose Delgado made the following remarks as recorded in the Congressional Record of February 24, 1974, No. 26, Vol. 118: "We need a program of psychosurgery for political control of our society. The purpose is physical control of the mind. Everyone who deviates from the given norm can be surgically mutilated. The individual may think that the most important reality is his own existence, but this is only his personal point of view. This lacks historical perspective. Man does not have the right to develop his own mind. This kind of liberal orientation has great appeal. We must electrically control the brain. Some day armies and generals will be controlled by electric stimulation of the brain." Dr. Delgado's experiments in this area were financed by grants from the Office of Naval Research, the Air Force Aero- Medical Research Laboratory, and the Public Health Foundation of Boston.

Electromagnetic Radiation (EMR). Dr. Jose Delgado was one of the first scientists to use electrical stimulation of the brain to control humans. In The New York Times of May 17, 1965 there was an article entitled "Matador With a Radio Stops Wild Bull." The investigative reporters of the Napa Sentinel reported this story and it details Dr. Delgado's experiments at Yale University School of Medicine and work in the field at Cordova, Spain. The Times article stated: "Afternoon sunlight poured over the high wooden barriers into the ring, as the brave bull bore down on the unarmed matador, a scientist who had never faced a fighting bull. But the charging animal's horn never reached the man behind the heavy red cape. Moments before that could happen, Dr. Delgado pressed a button on a small radio transmitter in his hand and the bull braked to a halt. Then he pressed another button on the transmitter, and the bull obediently turned to the right and trotted away. The bull was obeying commands in his brain that were being called forth by electrical stimulation by the radio signals to certain regions in which fine wires had been painlessly planted the day before."

That work was done in 1965. It has also been shown that nothing has to be planted near or in the brain for the victim to be controlled. It is now possible to make a person do the will of another with an electromagnetic signal by using a twitching muscle within the victim. A person is hypnotized and then a muscle stimulant is injected which causes the twitching of a muscle. While still under the hypnosis an electrical signal is received and the subject responds.

Again, in the Napa Sentinel article this book review was revealed. In a book entitled Were We Controlled? by Lincoln Lawrence, he shows how it is done: "If the subject is placed under hypnosis and mentally programmed to maintain a determination eventually to perform one specific act, perhaps to shoot someone, it is suggested thereafter, each time a particular muscle twitches in a certain manner, which is then demonstrated by using the transmitter, he will increase this determination even more strongly. As the hypnotic spell is renewed again and again, he makes it his life's purpose to carry out this act until it is finally achieved. Thus are the two complementary aspects of Radio-Hypnotic Intracerebral Control (RHIC) joined to reinforce each other, and perpetuate the control, until such time as the controlled behavior is called for. This is done by a second session with the hypnotist giving final instructions. These might be reinforced with radio stimulation in more frequent cycles. They could even carry over the moments after the act to reassure calm behavior during the escape period, or to assure that one conspirator would not indicate that he was aware of the co- conspirator's role, or that he was even acquainted with him." End of quotes.

Quite contrary to the popular misconception, a person can very easily be manipulated to do something that he considers immoral. It has been demonstrated many times and the technique has been perfected. Is this what happened to the hapless individual named Purdy at the Stockton, California school? Is that what happened at the Luby's Cafeteria in Texas? All that is needed is a political motivation, in these cases, the desire for total gun control and confiscation. The rest is simple.

We must keep in mind what happened to Uzziah in II Chronicles. He contracted leprosy! As we shall see, many of those who have been developing and using these terrible weapons have likewise contracted "leprosy!" As Yogi Berra once said, "It ain't over until the fat lady sings!"

It is now possible to either control the actions of a person at a distance with electromagnetic radiation or to effect a physical pain or illness. Different frequencies, power levels, and modulation are all that are needed to do these things. Experimentation is continuing at a rapid pace. There have been several Congressional Hearings on the use of such techniques and supposedly funding has been either reduced or removed. However, this appears to be just for political pacification of the masses because, even though Congress is aware of the continuation of these activities, funding is simply being accomplished through money laundering conduits, similar to the manner of the drug trade.

There is an organization in Silver Spring, Maryland called the Association of National Security Alumni. The credo of this organization speaks for itself. There are some individuals who are national security specialists who don't go along with these "true believers" and "chosen ones." That credo is:

"Covert actions are counterproductive and damaging to the national interest of the United States. They are inimical to the operation of an effective national intelligence system, and corruptive of civil liberties, including the functioning of the judiciary and a free press. Most importantly, they contradict the principles of democracy, national self-determination and international law to which the United States is publically committed." Credo of the Association of National Security Alumni.

In a document titled "Microwave Harassment and Mind-Control Experimentation," written by the Director, Electronic Surveillance Project, Association of National Security Alumni, December 1992, the following introduction appears:

"WHITHER THE KGB? In February 1974, Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) hosted discussions on the plight of dissenters in the Soviet Union, and on the means by which the U.S. Government might most effectively intervene.

Highlights of these discussions are reported in Understanding the Solzhenitzyn Affair: Dissent and its Control in the USSR (CSIS, 1974)."

"KGB strategies were addressed in some detail during these discussions. It was noted that the KGB's success depended on the extensive use of informant networks and agents provocateurs; and, following Brezhnev's rise to power, on the use of drugs and psychiatrists for purposes of manipulation and control. Shadowing, bugging, slandering, blacklisting and other related tactics were also cited as serving KGB purposes. Participants in the conference agreed that the KGB's obvious intent was to divide and isolate the populace, to spread fear, and to silence dissenters."

"Agencies of our own government are on record as having employed precisely these same tactics on a recurrent basis. The Church and Rockefeller Committee Hearings in the mid-1970's purportedly put an end to these practices. Based on recent developments, it would appear that the CIA's and FBI's Operations MKULTRA, MHCHAOS and COINTELPRO (the focus of these Senate Committee and Vice Presidential-level Hearings) were instead merely driven underground. We are now in contact with a total of 25 individuals, scattered throughout the United States, who firmly believe they are being harassed by agencies of the U.S. Government. Others have been brought to our attention whom we will be contacting in the future. The majority of these individuals claim that their harassment and surveillance began in 1989."

"The methods reportedly employed in these harassment campaigns bear a striking resemblance to those attributed to the CIA and FBI during Operations MKULTRA, MHCHAOS, and COINTELPRO. The only difference now is that electronic harassment and experimentation also appear to be (more blatantly) involved."

"The U.S. Global Strategy Council recognizes the issue of vulnerability, as well, and urges ongoing research into effective countermeasures."

"Interested readers may want to send for the U.S. Global Strategy Council's complete project proposal on this subject (Title: Nonlethality: Development of a National Policy and Employing Nonlethal Means in a New Strategic Era, prepared by Janet Morris). A number of references in this Proposal to unidentified, elusive 'enemies' of the U.S. Government and to the potential domestic applications of this 'non-lethal' technology invite serious consideration by the public at large. The Council's address is 1800 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006 (202) 466-6029)."

"BIOEFFECTS of MICROWAVE RADIATION. Research into the biological and psychological effects of exposure to microwave radiation is voluminous. The U.S. public has been led to believe that the former Soviet Union leads in this research. The fact is, the CIA and DOD have jointly pursued precisely the same research since commencement of Project Pandora in the 1950's. The current primary users of this research appear to be the CIA, DOD, the National Security Agency (NSA) and the Department of Energy (DOE)."

"The Walter Reed Army Institute of Research (WRAIR) has participated in this research since Project Pandora. In 1973, WRAIR discovered that externally-induced auditory input could be achieved by means of pulsed microwave audiograms, or analogs of spoken words' sounds. The effect on the receiving end is the (schizophrenic) sensation of 'hearing voices' which are not part of the recipients' own thought processes."

"The experiment prompted the following comment in The Body Electric: Electromagnetism and the Foundation of Life, by Robert O. Becker, M.D., and Gary Selden (Wm. Morrow & Company, NY, 1985): 'Such a device has obvious applications in covert operations designed to drive a target crazy with 'voices' or deliver undetectable instructions to a programmed assassin.' "

"This research has continued, and the results are published in various publicly available scientific and technical journals. Interested readers might consult, for example: Lin, James C., Electromagnetic Interaction with Biological Systems (Plenum Press, NY, 1989). Professor Lin, then with the Department of Bioengineering, University of Illinois, Chicago, has published a number of books and articles on this subject. (He has more recently informed us that he had designed the experiment referenced above in Dr. Becker's book)."

"WRAIR has more recently been studying the biological effects of exposure to high-power microwave radiation. WRAIR presented a paper on this subject to a DOD-sponsored symposium on 'MW (microwave) Weapons' at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, CA, in mid-1989."

"A matter of interest to us is why WRAIR should be experimenting with auditory effects of pulsed microwave audiograms. Also, recent statements by an Army psychiatrist assigned to the Walter Reed Army Medical Center (WRAMC) suggest that Walter Reed Army Medical Center (WRAMC) suggest that WRAIR may be experimenting upon select psychiatric inpatients with microwaves. This, too, is a matter of interest to us."

"CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT. The Government's past record of abuses in the area of civil rights is well documented. Within the past 30 years alone, we have witnessed the effects of Operations MKULTRA, MHCHAOS and COINTELPRO."

"Primarily because of MKULTRA, MHCHAOS and COINTELPRO, Executive Orders and implementing regulations were published which prohibited military and CIA domestic covert intelligence operations. Experiments on involuntary human subjects, and the surveillance of/collection of personal information on U.S. citizens, except under strictly regulated conditions were also prohibited."

"Congressional committees were created to oversee compliance with these (quasi-) legal prohibitions. We have evidence that this is not being done. Moreover, where there are laws and, in this case, no laws enacted, there are loopholes, as well as individuals and institutions who deliberately capitalize upon the existence of loopholes. Iran-Contra is one of the more blatant recent examples. Loopholes are also found in government resort to "black" intelligence and weapons programs, in the use of contractors, and in the absence of clear definitions of such terms as "national security" and "national security risk."

"Executive Orders and regulations which currently limit official U.S. Intelligence activities do not extend to non-intelligence government agencies or their contractors. In fact, Executive Order 12333 specifies that government contractors do not need to know that their services support U.S. Intelligence objectives."

"In its report of July 8, 1992, the Senate subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management addresses the problem of tracking funds granted to government-contracted research and development (R&D) centers. The report notes that the problem is compounded by DOD's penchant for creating hard-to-monitor 'shell' contractors as disbursement centers for funding programs."

"Neither shell contractors nor their subcontractors are directly accountable to Congress. Being beyond Congressional oversight, they have license to operate as Government surrogates in intelligence operations about which, 'officially,' they know nothing."

"Weapons research, which includes the development and testing of `non-lethal' weapons, is not governed by laws restricting the activities of U.S. Intelligence agencies, though it may be presumed that these agencies contribute to and benefit from such research." End of quotes.

So what do we have here? We have a system, developed under the "color" of Congressional law, which is allowed to operate as they see fit without any control by our elected legislators. When we consider that now, again under Congressional law, we have a "National Police Force" which utilizes the services of all government agencies and intelligence services such as DOD, DOJ, FBI, CIA, NSA, FEMA, DEA, BLM, Forest Service, etc., along with the multitude of state agencies, we can begin to understand how they operate. They contract services back and forth among all of these agencies with total impunity to Congressional law.

Congress seems to be acting like Pontius Pilate by simply "washing their hands" of the matter. Or do they know what is going on and is it intentional? In the 1970 House Committee on Appropriations for the Department of Defense we can read some very interesting discussions generated from their hearings.

On July 1, 1969 a conversation between Congressman Robert Sikes of Florida and Dr. MacArthur of the Department of Defense occurred. That conversation is preceded by a short explanation of the subject being discussed titled, "Synthetic Biological Agents."

"There are two things about the biological agent field I would like to mention. One is the possibility of technological surprise. Molecular biology is a field that is advancing very rapidly and eminent biologists believe that within a period of 5 to 10 years it would be possible to produce a synthetic biological agent, an agent that does not naturally exist and for which no natural immunity could have been acquired." The conversation follows:

Mr. Sikes: "Are we doing any work in that field?" Dr. MacArthur: "We are not." Mr. Sikes: "Why not? Lack of money or lack of interest?" Dr. MacArthur: "Certainly not lack of interest." Mr. Sikes: "Would you provide for our records information on what would be required, what the advantages of such a program would be, the time and the cost involved?" Dr. MacArthur: "We will be very happy to." The information requested by the Congressman follows:

"The dramatic progress being made in the field of molecular biology led us to investigate the relevance of this field of science to biological warfare. A small group of experts considered this matter and provided the following observations:"

"1. All biological agents up to the present time are representatives of naturally occurring disease and are thus known by scientists throughout the world. They are easily available to qualified scientists for research, either for offensive or defensive purposes."

"2. Within the next 5 to 10 years, it would probably be possible to make a new infective microorganism, which could differ in certain important aspects from any known disease-causing organisms. Most important of these is that it might be refractory to the immunological and therapeutic processes upon which we depend to maintain our relative freedom from infectious disease."

"3. A research program to explore the feasibility of this could be completed in approximately 5 years at a total cost of $10 million."

"4. It would be very difficult to establish such a program. Molecular biology is a relatively new science. There are not many highly competent scientists in the field. Almost all are in university laboratories and they are generally adequately supported from sources other than DOD. However, it was considered possible to initiate an adequate program through the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council (NAS-NRC)."

"The matter was discussed with the NAS-NRC, and tentative plans were made to initiate the program. However, decreasing funds in CB (Chemical-Bacteriological-ed.), growing criticism of the CB program, and our reluctance to involve the NAS-NRC in such a controversial endeavor have led us to postpone it for the past 2 years."

"It is a highly controversial issue and there are many who believe such research should not be undertaken lest it lead to yet another method of massive killing of large populations. On the other hand, without the sure scientific knowledge that such a weapon is possible and an understanding of the ways it could be done, there is little that can be done to devise defensive measures. Should an enemy develop it, there is little doubt that this is an important area of potential military technological inferiority in which there is no adequate research program." End of quotes.

The work was accomplished and, according to Dr. Lorraine Day, former Head Orthopedic Surgeon of the San Francisco General Hospital, the resultant virus is now known as HIV. Dr. MacArthur's fears of such a program leading to the massive killing of large populations apparently has come true.

This is a specific example of the poor oversight of the Congress that Julianne McKinney of the Association of National Security Alumni described in his report. Scientists in the various universities throughout the nation are sub-contracted to accomplish work on projects such as this and they may not even know why they are doing it or if it is a part of the national security effort. It would seem to this writer that all of this could change with very simple actions on the part of Congress and with the appropriate felony charges for those within the government found breaking the law. Alas! We must assume that Congress knows about these loopholes and intend to do nothing.

How can so many intelligent people be convinced that what they are doing is for motherhood and against sin? The method is simple and was described in Walter Bernays' book "Propaganda" written in 1928. First, describe our country's agenda and efforts as noble and righteous. Show that the survival of the entire world rests on our shoulders. Second, demonize the perceived, actual or imaginary enemy. That enemy must be eliminated at all costs. Third, deify to a position above the masses, those employed to protect this country's efforts. True morality and righteousness are immaterial. Fourth, use the national media (capable of reaching all of the peoples of the world) repeatedly to teach this sequence that was described by Walter Bernays.

Dr. MacArthur used elements of this technique, knowingly or unknowingly, in his discussion with Congressman Sikes when he said, "...without the sure scientific knowledge that such a weapon is possible, and an understanding of the ways it could be done, there is little that can be done to devise defensive measures. Should an enemy develop it there is little doubt that this is an important area of potential military technological inferiority in which there is no adequate research program." Congress is almost shamed into passing appropriations with no regard to the morality involved when they hear such arguments. We also see Bernays' system at work when the media repeatedly refers to the "thin blue line," the "nation's finest," and "the elite" when discussing the national police force and the military.

MacArthur did point out that there was growing criticism of the chemical and bacteriological warfare effort. It has been discovered that the use of electromagnetic radiation would be as effective but without the extreme danger of the BW methods.

Consequently, Congress has passed appropriations for such effort and now appears to be defending the use of these techniques. After the Waco conflagration, Congress convened a special hearing to investigate the government's actions. It was readily observed by most Americans that the committee exonerated the Department of Justice's actions as being in accord with national policies and agenda.

But the one thing that did come out of the government's actions, not only at Waco but at the Weaver standoff in Idaho, was the desire on the government's part to use what is being pushed as a more "benign" system for the control of perceived enemies of the state. Consequently, the Attorney General requested and attended a meeting at Los Alamos, New Mexico which focused on the law enforcement applications of "directed-energy" weapons technologies. The Attorney General endorsed these techniques as being "non-lethal." We will again refer to the document prepared by the Director, Association of National Security Alumni titled "Microwave Harassment and Mind-Control Experimentation." He discussed a project proposal, prepared by Janet Morris of the U.S. Global Strategy Council, titled: "Nonlethality: Development of a National Policy and Employing Nonlethal Means in a New Strategic Era." The meeting, which the Attorney General attended at Los Alamos appears to be the culmination of the efforts outlined in Morris' project proposal.

There are many qualified individuals who realize that the government has already tested electro-magnetic directed-energy weapons systems on U.S. citizens in a manner, which they describe as "government-sponsored terrorism." It is also recognized that these technologies will not solve the crime problem in this country but quite the contrary. These weapons are being used to perpetrate crime on the part of the government under circumstances that Congress has allocated funds to be used for "experiments."

There are several techniques used to accomplish what is called electro-magnetic directed-energy weapons. They all effect the electrical system of the human body and they can in no way be considered "non-lethal." According to an article titled: "Electro-magnetic Field Monitoring of Changing State-Function, Including Hypnotic States" found in the Psychosomatic Dentistry and Medicine Journal Vol. 17, No. 4, 1970, The human body communicates internally by EM and electrochemical impulses. The EM field displayed in Kirlian photographs, the effectiveness of acupuncture, and the body's physical responses to various types of EM radiation (X-rays, infrared radiation, visible light spectra, etc.) are all examples of human sensitivity to EM forces and fields. Atmospheric EM activity is regularly altered by such phenomena as sunspot eruptions and gravitational stresses which distort the Earth's magnetic field. Under varying external EM conditions, humans are more or less disposed to the consideration of new ideas.

In a book titled Microwave Auditory Effects and Applications by James C. Lin, Ph.D. we find this: "Direct communication of speech via appropriate modulation of microwave energy has been demonstrated by Sharp and Grove. They tape recorded each of the single-syllable words for digits between one and ten. The speech waveforms of each word were then converted to digital signals in such a fashion that each time an analog speech wave crossed the zero reference in the negative direction, a short pulse of microwave energy was emitted from the transmitter. By radiating themselves with the 'speech modulated' microwave energy, Sharp and Grove reported they were able to hear, identify, and distinguish the words tested. Communication of more complex words and sentences was not attempted because the average power density required to transmit these messages would exceed the current 10 milliwatt per square cm guide for safe exposure. The capability of communicating directly with humans by pulsed microwaves is obviously not limited to the field of therapeutic medicine. However, as Justensen indicated, the question of how much microwave radiation exposure an individual can safely tolerate will probably forestall applications in the immediate future." End of quote. The frequency used in that experiment was 3000 Mhz.

We do not know if substantial improvements in this technique have been developed since 1975 (when this was written) that would allow more complex speech to be transmitted directly by pulsed microwaves directly on a subject. Assuming there have been some more sophisticated techniques developed which would allow the government to use this technique without immediate damage to the recipient, it is doubtful that all dangers have been removed.

If one will review the video films taken by the news media of the assault on the Branch Davidians by the ATF and the ensuing PSYOPS program of the FBI, a small microwave dish can be seen on the top of a portable pole. That microwave dish was directed towards the Branch Davidian's complex.

Another technique, using electro-magnetic pulses, is called ELF which stands for Extra Low Frequency. This is considered to be from 100 cycles per second on down to below 10 cps. The infamous "Russian Woodpecker" signal uses the 10 cps frequency. It is well documented that this lower frequency is being used for weather modification. It is likewise well documented that it is used for the psychological modification of the human brain.

The human body is attuned to the natural cyclic frequency of about 8 cycles per second of the magnetic fields surrounding the earth. The ordinary compass works using that magnetic field. If that natural cycle is modified, either by natural means such as sunspot activity or by man-made electromagnetics, the human body is "captured" by that different signal and the physiological and psychological aspects of the body are modified. That magnetic pulse can enter the body either through electromagnetic means or by light pulses such as the psychedelic strobe lights the rock bands use. The light pulses are changed into magnetic pulses inside the brain.

If those pulses are raised above the 8 cps, the person becomes happy, daring and uninhibited. We see the effects of that during rock concerts. If the pulses are lowered below the 8 cps, the person becomes lethargic, moody and, if lowered enough, becomes subject to epileptic-type attacks. Death can result from such manipulations and researchers say it has been demonstrated on hapless civilians at different times. Such a technique can obviously be one of their "non-lethal" directed-energy electromagnetic weapons!

Another system that is being used is that of ultrasonics. By using directed beams of ultrasonic signals at discreet frequencies, the victim responds in a convulsive manner. Such devices are available on the open market as repellers of attacking dogs and would-be muggers. Warnings are issued with the device indicating the extreme danger to human beings if "misused." Intense pain with nausea, watering eyes and headaches are common symptoms. Some of these devices are small enough to fit in a shirt pocket. The beams created are highly directional and therefore can be used as a weapon.

According to some reporters who were in the field covering the war between Russia and Afghanistan, it was revealed that the Soviets used, on occasion, a portable device (held to the shoulder like a rifle) that would actually cause death to the victim. It was an electromagnetic weapon of some kind. The Mujahadeen called it the "Blue Death." If this report is true, and it appears to be, then "non-lethal" becomes "lethal" with the turn of an intensity control.

What are the short-term goals of these high-technology "non-lethal" weapons? According to the Assn. of National Security Alumni, these goals are 1. to develop an effective means for creating a perfect, "robotized" soldier; 2. to alter individual sexual preferences, such as by turning heterosexuals into homosexuals. It is allegedly claimed that there are difficulties in reversing the process; 3. enhance or destroy levels of academic achievement, at will, such as by degrading the performance of otherwise brilliant students. Government is playing God and we can see in this the "Uzziah" syndrome found in II Chronicles, Chapter 26.

The longer term goals are aptly described in Chris Hables Gray's book "Cyborg Worlds." Mr. Gray describes the soldier of the modern world but we can directly apply what is being said to the nation's law enforcement personnel. In fact, it now has become a homogenous organization with the interchange of equipment and men at command. Future wars "need soldiers with new military virtues who can meet the incredible requirements of high-technology war. These new soldiers are moulded, in part, by personnel science and marketing analysis in uneasy alliance with traditional military discipline and community. But in another sense it is the weapons themselves that are constructing the U.S. soldier of today and tomorrow."

"...the military is moving towards a more subtle man/machine integration: a cybernetic organism ('cyborg') model of the soldier, that combines machine-like endurance with a redefined human intellect subordinated to the overall weapon's system."

"Despite governmental restrictions on information, conscious official disinformation, and a secret military 'black' budget of over $35 billion for 1988...A great deal can be discovered about these developments from obscure journals, public documents, and concerned participant-observers. It is just too big to hide..."

They are working and may even have perfected, at least to a degree, medicines that are anti-fatigue and anti-stress that work without degradation to performance. Dr. Richard Gabriel, a noted military psychiatrist, claims that, "...the U.S. has already developed at least three prototypes. If the search is successful, and it almost inevitably will be, the relationship between soldiers (and law enforcement-ed.) and the battle environment will be transformed forever...if they succeed...they will have banished the fear of death and with it will go man's humanity and his soul."

An equally but perhaps more sinister program is being conducted. The Army contracted with the West Texas State University and the Stanford Research Institute to work on the growing of rat and monkey neurons to silicon biochips. The Scientific American magazine reported on this as far back as 1987. They have succeeded in their work. The goal is to develop biochips that can be activated by hormones and neural electrical stimulation, which will, in turn, initiate hormonal and mental behaviour in humans. Supposedly such human-machine integration will result in quicker reaction times, better communication, improved control and greater reliability of accomplishing the assigned mission.

All of this means that they are developing the capability of the soldier or law enforcement to kill when ordered and they will be minutely directed from a distance through these biochips implanted in the human.

This is not to be taken lightly. They mean business and they are spending billions upon billions of dollars of taxpayers money to accomplish it. Is it really for the purpose of defending this country against an enemy? Not hardly. It is to be used for people control, world-wide. It is a certainty that it will be used many times more often on the civilian population than it will be used in combat against a foreign nation's military.

It is time to return to the story of Uzziah. In verse 20 of II Chronicles, Chapter 26 we again read, "And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold he was leprous in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself hasted also to go out, because the Lord had smitten him. And Uzziah the king was leper unto the day of his death..."

In modern America, we don't have a king such as Uzziah. We have what is heralded as a "democratic" elected government so our King Uzziah is the entire government from the President and Congress, through all the branches of government, to the lowly soldier and policeman walking the beat.

Let us reflect on the recent history of this country's actions using this touted "high-technology." Not only is the military in the several overseas operations but the law enforcement here at home included. Our mission to Libya to destroy Qaddafi resulted in the death of his daughter and that of civilians as well. The rescue mission to retrieve the embassy personnel in Iran was a miserable failure. The "smart bombs" for the "surgical bombing" of Iraq met with minimal success. Four bombs were dropped on Serbian forces in Bosnia but only one worked and it hit the wrong target! The "high-technology" was totally thwarted when two sophisticated F16 jets downed two of our own helicopters in Iraq. The killing of Gordon Kahl at Smithville AR ended up with the killing of a comparatively innocent sheriff. The assault on the Randy Weaver home in Idaho ended up with the killing of a mother holding a ten months baby in her arms and the killing of a 14 year old boy by shooting him in the back. Yes, "Uzziah has "leprosy" and his inventing of "engines" by "cunning men" isn't always working! Cry unto the Lord!
