Ms. Ilibagiza was born & raised in a small village in Rwanda, Africa, where she had an idyllic childhood. All that changed when she returned home on a college break in April 1994.

Immaculée survived the Rwandan genocide by hiding in a 3x4 foot bathroom with seven other women. After 91 days, she was liberated only to discover that 1 million people, including most of her family and friends, had been brutally murdered.

Her memoir Left to Tell became an international bestseller, translated into over 21 languages. Immaculée's personal story of faith, hope, and forgiveness is currently being adapted for the big screen with an expected major motion picture release date in 2023.
