One singer might be a force, but five is a family. It's impossible to deny: there's just something about the power of a band, where songs form a bond thicker than blood. Which speaks to so many different corners of the music lover's heart. That experience is at the core of LANCO - singer and lyricist Brandon Lancaster, Chandler Baldwin (bass guitar), Jared Hampton (keyboards), Tripp Howell (drums) and Eric Steedly (guitar) - and their version of modern country that's fit for arenas but sounds equally sweet on the jukebox of a local honkytonk. It's a collective effort from five artists with solid southern roots that rocks and twangs equally, making songs like "Greatest Love Story," their newest single, resonate like few others: one part classic, one part cutting edge and completely honest.

"A song like 'Greatest Love Story' defines the reason we are in country music," says Lancaster. "We all relate to it. Anyone who knows about finding love or losing love, there is a piece of their story in the song. We've already seen how much it impacts people, and it means the world." "Greatest Love Story," is pure LANCO, showcasing Lancaster's smooth vocals alongside the band's infectious melodies. Anchored by lush acoustic guitar, a thumping drumbeat and hints of John Mellencamp-style rock, it's the kind of song that makes the listener optimistic about love – and the future of country music.

In a few short years, LANCO has gone from playing to audiences of thirty to playing festivals like Bonnaroo and Stagecoach, in a story that could have only formed in the south. A native to the Nashville area, Lancaster started writing songs in his early teenage years – and, growing up in Tennessee, country music was as intrinsic to his childhood as skyscrapers are to New York City. "It's weird to say that country is an influence, because it was almost a part of growing up," says Lancaster, whose father made sure to school him on southern rock, too. "It was the most prevalent thing going on." But Lancaster was also a sponge, devouring vinyl as fast as iTunes and listening to everything from Kings of Leon to Keith Urban and Bob Dylan, deconstructing what makes a band great, a lyric powerful and melody unforgettable.

It was in college where Lancaster met his band mates, all on a search to meld their country background with a wide ranging appreciation of music from all genres: from Steedly's taste for Stevie Ray Vaughan to Howell's love of hip-hop. At the root, though, was always country music. "There's a reason we are in country music." Indeed, nothing can get them going like a good Alabama or Willie Nelson song. "We're just five guys with different influences trying to make music the way our heroes did for us," adds Steedly.

It was another hero that helped create one of LANCO's most iconic moments.

At a concert one night – where he was working concessions at the hotdog stand – Lancaster mustered up the courage to stop producer Jay Joyce (Eric Church, Brothers Osborne, Cage the Elephant) – not looking for anything but to tell him he was a true fan, still in his uniform and name tag. The encounter led to Lancaster leaving with Joyce's number, but it was weeks later when he finally threw caution to wind and gave him a call. Joyce asked him what he wanted in life, point blank. "I said, 'I want to be an artist, I want to be a songwriter, and I'm going to keep working at the hotdog stand until I do.' He said, 'OK, come over to my studio tomorrow at 3:30 p.m.'" Lancaster was floored, and the five members of LANCO showed up the next day armed with their instruments and an arsenal of songs.

The result is LANCO's self-titled four-song debut EP, which Joyce produced. From the classic southern swagger of "Trouble Maker" to the confessional anthem of "We Do," the band doesn't see boundaries – just a love for honest songs and music that pushes the genre forward without ever losing sight of where it's been. It's an approach that is even clearer in their live shows, which are some of the most dynamic concert experiences around. "We're never afraid to make the most of a moment," says Lancaster. "Other people stand on stage, but we're going to jump in the crowd, kick a drum set over. We never want to have any boundaries."

There are no boundaries, either, when it comes to the people they touch: LANCO is short for the band's original name, "Lancaster & Company," which was meant to not only include each other, but each and every fan connects to their songs.

"There is a culture to LANCO," says Hampton. "We do this because we love country music, but also because everything we feel and sing about, someone else does too. That's the biggest power there is."

"It's just five guys," adds Lancaster, "being as honest as we can be."

EXHIBITORS NEED TO FURNISH THEIR OWN
BEDDING FOR CAGES

REQUESTED TESTING OF POULTRY:

- Poultry Show will be held on Aug. 3rd of the Achievement Days/County Fair.

All poultry (chickens, ducks, geese and turkeys, i.e. anything with feathers) will need to be tested before being allowed to show at all fairs/achievement days in ND starting in 2013.

Should one or more of the poultry operations in ND experience a serious disease outbreak, federal indemnity to commercial and non-commercial poultry owners could be withheld, due to noncompliance with federal testing requirements and could be a serious financial loss to the state's poultry producers.

There may be spot checking of local fairs and the ND State Fair by state or federal employees.

Below are the requirements regarding the pullorum testing requirements for exhibition/show poultry.

1. Poultry purchased within 4 months are exempt from this testing requirement if they have been purchased from a NPIP flock and have not been mixed with other non-tested chickens. An example would be you purchased your chicks from TSC, Fleet-Farm or other NPIP suppliers. You can take the Poultry Exhibition Statement of Origin form available from the extension office, have your dealer fill out the form and your set for showing. These poultry will need to be banded.
2. If you have older chickens (over 4 months old), then they will have to be tested 30 days before showing.
3. All older chickens in your flock must be tested, even ones that will not come to the fair.
4. Testing must be performed by a certified person.
5. Once tested the bird must have a band attached to a leg, there are special bands available but for ease a plastic wire tie would work as long as it's been numbered, a fine tipped permanent marker could be used.

Jackie Buckley is a certified tester and is willing to test your birds. All birds will need to be tested prior to July 15, 2017. Please call Jackie Buckley at 701-391-7113.

SLAMABAMA

Hits the stage at the Morton County Fair, August 5th.

From the first note to the last encore, the energy and intensity of SLAMABAMA will have your undivided attention. On the verge of breaking out, these 4 musicians' incomparable stage presence can only be described as a uniquely perfect blend of Sugarland and Van Halen. They have built a reputation of unequaled stamina on-stage as they seamlessly go from one song to the next without wasting time. They always keep the energy and fun moving toward an out of control pace for an intense concert experience for all. Be prepared to join in the fun when you sing along to all of your favorites and be blown away by how much you love the original music from their 2 successful album releases. Slamabama has entertained crowds at numerous fairs, festivals and clubs throughout the Midwest, West and Southern United States. A fan favorite at the ND State Fair, we are excited to have Slamabama join the Morton County Fair.

FAIR DEDICATION

We will be honoring these two gentlemen at the Morton County Fair Saturday, August 5th in the Beef Showring at Noon.

Lyle Warner earned a master's degree in agricultural education at NDSU in 1981. His career in agricultural education has spanned 36 years. He was at the North Dakota State College of Science in Wahpeton from 1976 to 1981 and was at Bismarck State College 1982- 2009. He has participated in numerous local and statewide boards and advisory committees. He also has been recognized for his accomplishments with honors, including induction into the NDSU Saddle and Sirloin Club Hall of Fame as Agriculturalist of the Year, and given the highest honor of Master Sheep Producer by the North Dakota Lamb and Wool Producers Association. Warner helped with many sheep fitting clinics for 4-H youth and has judged many county state and regional shows. He and his grandkids exhibited at the Morton County Fair for many years.

Don Eck is a graduate of NDSU. Don taught the animal science classes at Bismarck State College for 27 years. His children were very involved in many 4-H activities in Burleigh County and they showed at the Morton County Fair. Don helped at the Western 4-H Camp at the 4-H Livestock Camp. Don was an advisor for the BSC PAS Club and helped many of his students prepare for their future careers as well as going back to the farm or ranch. Don was also instrumental in starting the Maximum Economic Yield Club in South Central North Dakota.
