Linzee Kull McCray is a freelance writer and editor with a focus on textiles, crafts, and art. A former writer and editor for the University of Iowa, contributing editor at Stitch, columnist for the French magazine Quilt Country, and regular contributor to the Etsy blog, she continues to write profiles and features for American Patchwork and Quilting, American Quilt Retailer, Quilt Sampler, UPPERCASE, and Moda's Cutting Table blog. Her work has appeared in Modern Patchwork, O: The Oprah Magazine, Parents, and Mary Jane's Farm, and she is the author of the book Art Quilts of the Midwest, which serves as the basis of a June 29 to October 1, 2017, exhibition at the Texas Quilt Museum.

Nancy Ray is a quilt maker and a quilt collector. Soon after she started quilting more than 30 years ago, she saw a string quilt in an antique shop and her interest in this fascinating technique began. She collects old string quilts, and she makes string quilts. So sparse is the documentation about string piecing techniques, and string quilts in general, that she learned about these fascinating quilts largely by collecting and studying the quilts themselves. Portions of her string quilt collection were exhibited at the Vermont Quilt Festival, 2005, and the West Virginia Quilt Festival, 2012.

In addition to our speakers, we will also feature a small exhibit of Texas quilts.
