Robbie Laird

Workshop

presented by CCWS
CENTRAL COAST WATERCOLOR SOCIETY

This workshop is about how to make stronger and more personal paintings based on design, and on the underlying abstraction found in all of nature. Each painter will select their own subject(s) of inspiration and Robbie will guide you through a series of exercises and studies that enable a transition from a literal depiction to a uniquely personal painting. Your paintings will be based on strong design basics combined with a variety of exciting personalized techniques. The result is a new and expanded way to use the abstract quality of nature in your own unique painting expression.

Painters at all levels of accomplishment are encouraged to participate since the individual instruction given in the afternoons will be adapted to each person's needs.

Robbie Laird is an innovative painter, teacher, and juror. Her paintings captivate the viewer with an exciting balance of flowing ambiguity and varying amounts of specific detail. Using large brushes and

President's Message

What to paint today!

With paint, paper, a brush or two and a container of water and now you are ready to paint, but what will I paint today? How many times has this been the stopping place for your adventure into creating the painting for the day? It has stopped me several times, so I do not think I am alone with this mental stoppage.

When looking for subject materials an Inspirational quote such as that by Paul Strand should be in your mind. Strand said, "The artist's world is limitless. It can be found anywhere, far from where he lives or a few feet away. It is always on his doorstep." Now that you have a limitless world of subjects to paint, what is stopping you? If it was only so easy, right!

Inspiration can be found quickly in several areas. One place to start looking for subject material is to go to your studio and start pulling out some old paintings from the drawers or the piles you have on shelves. Next, take some various size mats and start looking for compositions that exist within your original painting. You spent time and effort painting the original and there will be multiple other compositions that can be utilized and perhaps enlarged within a previous painting. Maya Angelou said, "You can't use up creativity. The more you use, the more you have." The same applies to your compositions.

Very few water media painters repaint a composition. Ask yourself how many times you have painted the same painting and you will probably find it is less than a handful of times. The masters flowing paint, her work dances on the edge of abstraction in areas but pulls you back in others. She sometimes uses the unique qualities of flowing transparent pure watercolor to create mysterious rhythmic works, while in other pieces she incorporates a variety of other watermedia. The continuing source of inspiration for Laird's work is a life-time interest in cycles and natural transitions and connections. Her paintings have received numerous awards in National and International exhibitions. Laird is a signature member of the National Watercolor Society, Watercolor West, the National Association of Painters of Acrylic, the San Diego Watercolor Society, and is a full-juried member of the Society of Layerists in Multi-Media. She is a highly sought after instructor and was named one of 20 Great Teachers of the last twenty years, by American Artists' Magazine.

Don't miss out on this great workshop. There are still slots available, but they will fill quickly.

wide range of colors. After practicing basic brush strokes, the class then watched several short demonstrations and began applying the information to their pre-drawn image to create a finished painting. This has been a well received and very popular program for the various library branches throughout the county.

The last class of this series will be held at the San Luis Obispo Library located in SLO at 995 Palm St. If you know of someone who would like to attend, please have them check the library website www.slolibrary.org or contact Ms. Matta at (805) 781-5989 or mmatta@slolibrary.org. Chris Van Winkle Memorial Award

To our members and friends of Chris Van Winkle. For the 2018 Aquarius Show, we are establishing what we hope will be an annual award to honor a local artist and past or present member of CCWS. This year the award goes to Chris Van Winkle.

Many Central Coast artists, from aspiring to professional, studied with Chris. Because he was fortunate to have studied with many of the great California painters, he felt strongly that it was his responsibility to pay it forward. He was extremely generous to his students, both with his time and knowledge.

Members and friends can contribute any amount to CCWS in his name and it will go towards the award. Please send checks to: Sarah DeLong, 385 Arcadia Ave., Morro Bay, CA 93442.

Marcie Hawthorne is an award-winning fine artist and illustrator who specializes in joyful realism. She is also an accomplished wall artist whose work includes over 100 murals for private residences, as well as projects for a wide variety of public spaces and commercial buildings. She is also a Signature Member of the Central Coast Watercolor Society.

"This year's Festival Mozaic has the theme 'Music Without Borders.' I was pleased to be chosen as the featured artist, tasked to create the signature painting for the festival which will be utilized on posters and other publicity materials. The original 24x30 inch cradled panel will be auctioned during the festival."

As the featured artist for this event, Marcie first met with Bettina Swigger, Executive Director of the festival to discuss their needs and goals. They wanted to reach both classical and cross-over audiences, young and mature and they needed an image that would convey their theme of "Music Without Borders." These were the requirements that Marcie needed to meet:

- Produce a large colorful original painting to be auctioned at the end of the Festival
- It had to be eye-catching and contemporary
- Graphic enough for use in commercial items such as large posters, brochures, cards, T-shirts, scarves, etc.
- The colors were to be Summer 2018 Pantone colors
- She had to include at least one chamber music instrument

Marcie does lots of sketching as part of her process, both with pencil and digitally. She also did a lot of internet browsing and research for this project as well as color studies.

Design Process

A musical score superimposed over a world map was an idea she came up with to imply music without borders. To do this she painted her own world map using acrylic similarly to transparent watercolors, thinned with medium and painted in successive layers to achieve brilliant colors. Then she learned a new technique to digitally impose a hand-drawn musical score on to the map. She used clear color at the turning point edge (on the violin). More sketches and she was ready to set up a still-life with an antique viola, a dahlia bloom and the map with the musical score imprinted on it from which she could paint the final piece.

Brochure for the Festival Mozaic 2018

Marcie thought she was done and on schedule but at the last minute she had to alter the wee knobs to holes on her antique viola. Because the finest violins are often the oldest, this one mimicked the antique price-less Stradivarius that are played by the top musicians (the most expensive new ones copy this form). Thanks to gesso and her painting skills, Marcie miraculously still delivered the painting on time.

Mark Selby – Demonstration Artist for February

Mark Selby.

As a child, Mark was always drawing and making things. His first formal art instruction came in 1972 at Modesto Junior College. His instructor, Dan Petersen, was a watercolor master. He learned from him not only watercolor techniques but also the importance of design and composition. His instructor encouraged his students to work from life, which included plein air painting. Mark has continued to paint from life to this day whether plein air or figures. In 1983 Mark received a BA in Art from Cal State Stanislaus, CSUS. In 2012, he retired from a career in electric utility engineering and moved to Los Osos where he now makes art full time.

Over the years as family life and work consumed more time, Mark continued to find time to sketch in watercolor, mostly outdoors. It is from those decades of painting that he developed techniques to quickly capture the images from life that he wanted. In his demonstration, he will share some of those tips and techniques with our group.

Mark Selby, our Feb presenter paints large plein-air landscapes quickly and he will share his tips with us.

Signature Member, Jo-Neal Boic – Demonstration Artist for March

Friends by Jo-Neal Boic

Born and raised in the San Francisco Bay area, Jo-Neal graduated from California State East Bay as a dance major. Several years after graduating she began to explore watercolor, for which she developed a passion that endures to this day. She returned to school to pursue a teaching credential in art and painting from UC Santa Cruz and Cabrillo Community College, after which she spent several months studying at a private art school in Florence, Italy, exploring fresco painting and restoration; oil painting and restoration; and serigraphy.

For 12 years, she taught art and painting at the secondary level and also spent a year teaching theatre arts, watercolor, and dance at a private international school near Antwerp, Belgium. Since her retirement 11 years ago, she has been teaching adults drawing and watercolor, both privately and for a variety of art organizations.

She will demonstrate her method for painting both brightly colored abstract expressionist-inspired landscapes and floral watercolors, working from one of her works-in-progress.
