Summer Media Camp for Students

bndimc.org

This two-week program will allow rising 8th - through 12th -grade students to discover visual technology as they learn to tell their stories in creative and engaging ways. The program will be led by Bonnie Newman Davis, executive director of the BND Institute of Media and Culture, Inc., a nonprofit organization that provides programs, services and training dedicated to educating and engaging diverse audiences about contemporary news media and its impact on African-American life and culture. In addition to Ms. Newman Davis, several professional media writers, editors, producers, photographers and videographers will assist in the program. Additional program activities will further enhance the student-learning experience! Students will bring their own lunch each day. Snacks and refreshments will be provided at no extra cost.
