Councilman Blaine Griffin Looks to Promote Neighborhood Pride

by Joel Beck

Ask Blaine Griffin about his vision for Cleveland’s Ward 6, and the newly elected city councilman’s answer may sound rather poetic.

“I want to get rid of what I like to call ‘stinkin’ thinkin,’” Griffin says with a grin.

Granted, aside from the rhyme, it’s not quite poetry. But it certainly reflects Griffin’s strong belief that building neighborhood pride in his district and throughout the city of Cleveland remains a top priority. It’s a continued goal that he says is highly reachable.

“I want to build a collaborative leadership model that gets people involved in a meaningful way,” says Griffin. “I want to change the mindset that some people have where they just want to get out of here. Neighborhood pride is very important to me. We want to set an example for young people who want to settle here and make Cleveland their home.”

A 23-year resident of Cleveland, Griffin was a member of Mayor Frank Jackson’s cabinet before being appointed to the City Council last May following the resignation of Mamie Mitchell. He earned reelection this past fall in Ward 6, where he represents a number of neighborhoods on Cleveland’s East Side, including Fairfax, Larchmere, Little Italy, Woodland Hills, and parts of Buckeye-Shaker, University Circle, North Broadway, Slavic Village and Union-Miles.

Even though he has been a City Council member for a relatively short time, Griffin has seen a number of successes during his tenure. He points to the city’s investment in the “Thrive 105-93” plan, an $80 million project to revamp a major corridor on the East Side. Griffin also highlights the opening of a Simon Shaker supermarket at the former Giant Eagle location on Buckeye Road as a major improvement in recent months.

“When Giant Eagle left, it created a huge void in our community,” says Griffin. “It wasn’t just about a grocery store. It was about stabilizing that plaza because without that anchor store, a lot of other businesses might have left.”

Fairhill Partners Recognized for Commitment to the Community

by Thomas Jewell

Celebrating its 30th anniversary last year, Fairhill Partners received the Cleveland Police Foundation’s Fourth District Community Service Award for going “above and beyond the call of duty.”

That sounds like another day at the office for Fairhill Partners President and CEO Stephanie Fall Creek Ph.D., her full-time staff of 15, and 150 to 200 regular volunteers at what she characterizes as a “social purpose strip mall.”

And it’s a very nice-looking strip mall at that, located in what originally served as the U.S. Marine Hospital, built in the overhead architectural image of an anchor and operating from 1930 to 1953.

Fairhill Partners has become an anchor in the community once again since the idea for the collaborative campus took shape in 1987, with the help of prominent organizations focused on older adults and led by University Hospitals and the Benjamin Rose Institute on Aging.

“The community services for which Fairhill Partners was recognized are diverse,” Fall Creek said. “They range from no-charge and donation-driven fitness classes to those supported by Medicare, to art therapy classes, to screenings for benefits like food stamps, Medicaid, and utility assistance, to support groups and education for adult family caregivers and older relatives raising children.”

The campus operates northeast Ohio’s only homeless shelter for older adults, a program serving 8 to 10 elders at a time and based out of the old doctors’ and officers’ quarters converted to townhouses. They also work with the Buckeye-Shaker Square-Larchmere Safety Initiative, hosting breakfast meetings several times a year facilitating collaboration among citizens leading neighborhood security efforts and various law enforcement agencies in an “ever-changing constellation.”

The award-winning 40-minute documentary short, from Oscar Winner and three-time Oscar nominated director/producer Thomas Lennon, chronicles the months leading up to the opening of the Cleveland, Ohio restaurant, EDWINS. Audiences are invited along to follow the passionate accounts of Brandon Chrostowski, the restaurant’s founder, and the formerly incarcerated men and women who staff the eatery as they tackle the intricate culinary trade and learn life lessons. The post-incarceration journey is plagued with mounting restaurant headaches and endless odds stacked against the participants. However, with one of the most aspiring and anticipated restaurant launches in Cleveland’s history, failure is not an option.

To roam, it’s a good idea to make sure they outside quickly becomes to house train a new puppy as getting may also make it a bit more difficult for older pets.

"Obesity and osteoarthritis are a major concern in our older pets and as they become less active or fat they may become hesitant to climb or go down the stairs," says Kim. He also notes that on a higher floor, it may also make it a bit more difficult to house train a new puppy as getting them outside quickly becomes difficult.

"If your cat or dog lives somewhere where they don’t have a lot of space to roam, it’s a good idea to make sure they get to work to get it out. It simulates the act of chasing on bones to get to the marrow, so it can clean the teeth and keep them busy," explains Kim. Environmental enrichment is especially important for cats, as most are indoors only. Playing with them with a feather on a string before meals can engage their hunting instincts and keep them active and help maintain a good body weight. The use of salt on sidewalks in the winter is something that owners need to be aware of as it can be painful for paws. Dr. Kim adds, “Ingestion of the salt can also cause vomiting and diarrhea so make sure you clean these feet off when coming inside.”
