Principal Program Manager- CSRS

Travis is a Principal at CSRS and leads the firm's infrastructure program management business. His career has been spent assisting public clients in planning and implementing capital improvement programs. He has worked closely with over 100 different consulting firms as either team members or managing them on behalf of owners. He has been intimately involved in the development and implementation of CSRS' mentor-protégé program. Travis earned an undergraduate degree in Industrial Engineering and an MBA, both from Louisiana Tech University.

I have had the opportunity to lead projects across very diverse areas. My experience includes serving as the Program Manager on a $550M Transportation Program, managing several of the most complex public real estate and relocation programs in the State of Louisiana, and leading multi-disciplinary teams studying the impacts of the economic growth in Southwest Louisiana on the community.

Our firm takes pride in developing and deploying innovative, tailored solutions to meet each client's unique needs. Rather than employ a one-size fits all strategy, we work to understand each problem and carefully craft a solution that best solves that problem. Our clients benefit from this approach by being confident that the solution being deployed is responsive to their specific needs.

My specific areas of expertise include capital program management, public real estate acquisition and relocation, capital budgeting, infrastructure planning, and project execution.
