

The answer will largely depend on your company's ability to borrow, and whether or not you choose to invest in property vs. other areas of your business. Leasing frees up capital for business operations. Buying the property gives the company control of its operating facilities and more control over costs. The company's cash flow, cash requirements, management resources and flexibility for needing the particular facility will determine the answer, all of which we can help analyze.