A Note from Rick: Traditional summer weather has set in and I love it. Temperatures in the 90's day after day with lots and lots of sunshine. There is some rain in the forecast here and there and if we could get some of that off and on , it would be perfect. Markets last week were mixed at TLA. The dairy cattle market was definitely the highlight. Dairy cattle prices continue to trend up slightly and with continued gains in the milk futures price on the CME, I look for this to continue. Feeder cattle, both dairy heifers and steers, have continued to hold strong and even show some slight gains. This is a bit of a surprise for this time of year. Calf prices were very steady as the number of holstein bull calves continues to drop. The slaughter cattle market was steady to slightly lower again this week and we're looking for this market to bottom out here soon and head the other direction. The slaughter cow market was lower as well. The overall quality and condition of cows this week compared to last was much lower as well, so I would call this market steady and look for it to continue that way. Enjoy the beautiful weather , pray for rain, and we hope to see you at TLA!
