A note from Rick: There is nothing really exciting to report on markets at TLA this week. Prices across the board were very steady. There is definitely a lot of uncertainty on how the rising feed prices will affect all of the livestock markets. Grain prices have increased rapidly and it is planting time for most. Chances are we will continue to see a lot of volatility in grain markets throughout the growing season, which will keep everyone guessing. Hay prices remain very strong and will be affected by this as well. We're into the slow time of year for hay trade as we start making new crop hay. This should allow time for things to settle out a bit and show just what and how this effect will be on the hay market. The St. Jude Horse Pull this past Saturday was a great event that raised a lot of money for a really awesome cause. Thank you to everyone that donated of their time, effort and out of their pockets to support this. I can't believe we are already in the month of May. I'm looking forward to the exciting schedule that we have coming up this month. See you at TLA!
