

Have You Seen This?

The information (and links) contained in this document were last updated in February, 2018.

Here is a simple idea for keeping potential show blooms from touching or rubbing against each other, thus causing damage. The damage may cause your “prized entries” to become less than show worthy. Click here.

Here is an analysis of new dahlias introduced (by year) as reported by the American Dahlia Society (ADS). Click on desired year.

2014, 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018

It is interesting that many “new” dahlias are introduced every year but, sadly, some that make a big splash in the beginning soon disappear from the listings. The following two lists (yearly details and 10 year summary) contain the names of the most enduring dahlias currently listed. These are dahlias that:

...were introduced 50 or more years ago

...are still listed in the current Classification Guide

...and have received 100 or more total awards in the most recent 10 years.