

Momentum is Building

2017 is about to become history. I have heard it many times at this point of the year. You have, too. "I cannot wait until this year is over. Let's get it over with quickly. I am ready for a fresh start. This next year will be much different." I am not here today to totally shred that thought to threads because often times it is a valid response to what has been taking place in a person's life. However, I do want to challenge its application in our present context. It is going to take a heavenly perspective. Will you embrace it? In so doing, you will build momentum into 2018.

1 Chronicles 12:32 ESV Of Issachar, men who had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do, 200 chiefs, and all their kinsmen under their command.

My point is that most of you are not stepping into a do-over or a blank slate. No, you have been serving the LORD and seeking to please Him. Your efforts are significant to the LORD. He takes notice of them. They are not going to be erased in a few minutes when 2018 begins. They will continually be before Him. He has a record of all of your good works.

Moreover, these righteous deeds are all connected to your destiny. Each work done in faith is propelling you further along in the path that your creator has mapped out for you. Momentum is building. 2018 will see a significant increase in the fulfillment of your destiny.

There is an if attached to that promise. You are going to have to partner with that momentum. Move with it. Do not resist it. You do not want to miss your moment. My walk with the LORD has had me cross paths many such people who had not recognized their day of visitation. They missed it. Don't be one of them.

Momentum is building in 2018. What will you do with it?