

“We’ve been paying insurance premiums all these years and my wife seldom wore her fine jewelry. We didn’t want the kids fighting over their inheritance. We sold the items and relieved ourselves of the burden. We finally took that world cruise in our retirement.”

“We had inherited all these things from my parents and didn’t know what to do with them. We didn’t entertain much and we didn’t need silver. We were able to put a new roof on our house and start a college fund.”

“I had all these things that were my family’s and I didn’t know what to do with them. I was paid fair market value and able to put away money for a rainy day.”
