NEWSLETTER NOTES

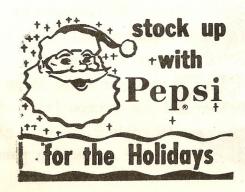

Congratulations to Aire Skowronski a PCCC member from San Diego, California. Aire recently won a contest sponsored by Pepsi-Cola of San Diego. The prize was 15 cases of Pepsi-Cola, the perfect prize for a Pepsi collector!

From a member in Canada comes word of a cherry flavored Pepsi-Cola soft drink. Winnipeg Canada was chosen as the launch site for Cherry Pepsi, it is not known at this time if or when Cherry Pepsi will be sold in the United States.

As the holidays quickly approach, I want to wish all of you a HAPPY AND SAFE HOLIDAY SEASON!

COLLECTORS SPOTLIGHT

In this issue of Collectors Spotlight we feature Carole Carlock of So. San Francisco, California.

I have always been a collector of something since I was a kid; marbles, baseball cards, arcade cards, dixie cup lids, later on records and Pepsi-Colā. My favorite collection now is Pepsi-Cola although I still buy Jazz l.p.'s.

I started drinking Pepsi-Cola back in the "Hits the Spot" jingle days. We like it better than other cola beverages because of the 12 full ounce size. I currently drink the 16oz. 6pack returnable bottles, even have it at breakfast.

When my husband and I were at a flea market, (he collects pre 1910 post cards), in 1971 I saw a Pepsi oval sign, I thought it was nice since I was a Pepsi drinking fiend. A little while afterward I found a mini bottle doubledot. That got me hooked on collecting. Every week we would search in flea markets, antique shows, and shops. It was very rare that we would spend over $5.00 for any one item.

My first trays were the singing children (1940's), a black tray with flowers (1940's), and "Hits the Spot" (red, white & blue 1940's). My favorite tray is the map of the United States bottle tray.

I have specialized in smaller promotional items such as lighters, key chains, tie clips, pins, buttons which are mostly commemorative items. I feel I have a very good representation in this area. My favorite signs are the self framed carboard girls from the 40's. I also like anything with 5¢ on it. I also collect old ads. My favorites are the movie stars "on the set". Toy trucks are fun to collect.

Sometimes the best items show up in the most unlikely palces. I bought a Pepsi minature sixpack at a show where jewelry was dispalyed. It belonged to the dealer, she had had it since a child and really didn't want to sell it. I also found a Pepsi mechanical pencil with a bottle on top from a dealer who handled fancy lamps. I feel that a person should collect whatever Pepsi items appeals to them; new or old. Collecting should be fun and not a competition of dollars paid for rare items. New collectors could start by collecting Pepsi glasses there is an endless variety of them, (I personally can't resist collecting them).

Anyone who collects should read about the subject or inquire and gain knowledge from advanced collectors. That is why I feel that the Pepsi-Cola Collectors Club is such a good thing, it helps by distributing knowledge and brings collectors together. Thanks to Bob Stoddard, he made the club a reality. Something we collectors talked about for years but he did something about.

If anyone has made a checklist of trays or has knowledge of any new issues, please get in touch with me. I don't believe anyone has made a list yet.

Even though I have been collecting Pepsi since 1971, I am still excited about finding and looking for "stuff" old and new. HAVE A PEPSI DAY!!

CLUB NEWS

The PCCC annual picnic will be held in July of 1986. Any members planning their vacation to Southern California should contact the club for further information.

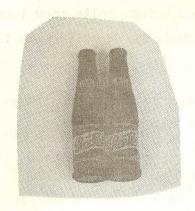

The month of November marks the 2nd anniversary of the founding of the Pepsi-Cola Collectors Club. In November 1983, Rick Russell, Lee Jackson, and myself (Bob Stoddard) met at Rick's home and developed the format that is the PCCC today.

The Southern California Chapter of the PCCC will be having their annual picnic/swap meet in July of 1986. Any members planning on attending from out of state should contact the club for further information, direct your inquiries to the club address.

Recently we discussed the need for PCCC memorabilia. We have several ideas of items we hope to develop. The first item that will be available as a club memorabilia will be a Pepsi-Cola Collectors Club license plate frame. They will be on sale beginning December 1, 1985. The price will be $3.50 plus .75¢ postage for a total amount of $4.25. Orders are being accepted now.

George Bradham is the last surviving offspring of Caleb Bradham, inventor of Pepsi-Cola and founder of the original Pepsi-Cola Company. In a recent interview via telephone with George Bradham (now 78 years old) I asked about the early days of Pepsi-Cola, the below article is a result of that interview.

INTERVIEW WITH GEORGE BRADHAM ON JULY 13, 1985 INTERVIEWED BY BOB STODDARD

Code: George Bradham - G.

Bob Stoddard - B.

- B. The first question I would like to ask, are you involved with the Pepsi Co?
- G. No, not officially.
- B. Do they ever ask you for appearances for anniversaries or other events?
- G. They do. They had the big meeting in New Bern, 85th anniversary. I was the Chief Marshal of the parade, stuff like that which I'm glad to do. I've been to two or three meetings of bottlers down at the beach in So. Carolina, and so forth, but I have no offical capacity and the company doesn't pay me anything. I'm glad to be of any assistance that I can.
- B. Are you aware of the popularity of all the Pepsi memorabilia today?
- G. Yes.
- B. Does this surprise you that it has become so popular?
- G. Well, no. I just think it's an American phenomena. People collect every damn thing there is. Some people collect Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola stuff, others collect shotguns, ... all kinds of things, you know, plants, whatever. Yeah, I'm familiar with that, and I had one poster here. A fellow came by one day and offered to buy it, I was ready to give it to him for $10.00, he reached in his pocket and said, "Would you take $200 for it?" I got to thinking then this guy wants this thing, so I said, "Oh no, I won't sell it for less than $500." He said "You drive a hard bargain." I said, "Well, that's what's this thing's worth, not too many of them around." So he reached into his pocket and pulled out a roll of bills and gave me five $100 bills, and I would have given to him for $10.00
- B. You must have been very young when Pepsi-Cola was first started?
- G. Well, I was born in 1907. The company really got going in 1903, when it was incorparated under the name Pepsi-Cola. It was pretty well along by the time I was born, but I'm familiar with the original plant in New Bern. I used to ride around in the wagon when they delivered Pepsi-Cola to the stores in old wooden crates.

- B. Was your father aware of the success Pepsi had obtained before he passed away?
- G. Well, it was beginning to come back to life, you know the story of Charlie Guth he had a candy store, well he began to revive Pepsi-Cola about the time my father passed away. So no, he didn't live long enough to know of Pepsi-Cola's
- B. Well, he sure had foresight with Pepsi-Cola.
- G. People ask me if my father started Pepsi-Cola then why aren't I rich? Well I tell them this company is the third corporation.
- B. I notice that Caleb Bradham, Jr. worked for the New York based company.
- G. Yes he did, he died. It's been sometime since he worked for them.
- B. I have an old magazine of theirs from 1940 with a picture of him. What did he do with the company?
- G. Caleb was in the promotions working with bottlers visiting bottling plants, and entertained them when they came to New York.
- B. One thing that I find very interesting is the starting date of Pepsi-Cola. They celebrated the 75th Anniversary in 1973, that would make Pepsi-Cola's starting date 1898.
- G. That's about right.
- B. Now, I've seen other things where Pepsi celebrated an anniversary in 1938, their 38th anniversary.
- G. I see the inconsistency. Pepsi-Cola itself started out as Brads drink. There was a company in Newark, New Jersey that had a drink called Pep Cola, that company went broke. My father bought the name Pep Cola frome them for a $100.00, and he changed the name to Pepsi-Cola. He had an artist that lived next door to us do the original logo, so that kind of started it. Actually it wasn't called Pepsi-Cola at first, my father experimented with it and finally called it Pepsi-Cola. So you see it's a matter of interpretation.
- B. Does the drink today taste quite a bit different from the time your father was first bottling it?
- G. I don't think so. It stayed pretty much the same. You know I tried Coca-Cola with their new stuff. I couldn't believe that they would screw up the formula like they did, it tasted flat. Have you ever tried it?
- B. No, I don't drink Coke at all.
- G. Well, I bought a six pack and gave it away to the help, and bought some more Pepsi-Cola which is what you drink.
- B. When Pepsi first started out, do you know if your father felt there was a rivalry between Coke and himself at that time?
- G. No, my father knew the Chandler family in Atlanta, they really started Coca-Cola. My father and Asa Chandler helped each other to some degree, they would talk things over, I don't know how they got together.
- B. There's a very big rivalry today, not only with Pepsi-Cola Company and Coca-Cola Company, but between the collectors.
- G. I know that, and that makes it more interesting.
- B. It makes it a lot of fun!

PEPSI-COLA FACTS

1960: "Be sociable. Have a PEPSI."

1961: "Now it's PEPSI for those who think young."

1963: "Come Alive! You're in the PEPSI generation."

1967: "Taste that beats the others cold. PEPSI pours it on!"

1969: "You've got a lot to live. PEPSI'S got a lot to give."

1973: "Join the PEPSI people. Feelin free."

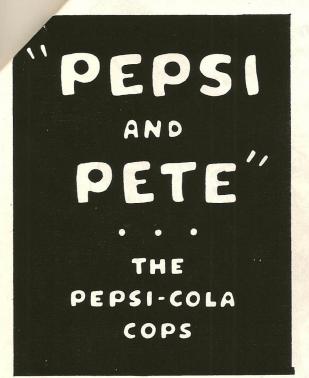

1976: "Have a PEPSI day!"

1979: "Catch that PEPSI spirit!"

1981: "PEPSI'S got your taste for life!"

1983: "PEPSI now! Take the challenge!"

In March 1958 Pabst Brewing Co. was in the middle of a proxy fight with several dissatisfied stockholders. As it was later revealed these dissatisfied stockholders approached Alfred N. Steele, then chairman of the Pepsi-Cola Co. about becoming a director of Pabst. Talks where broken off when the group learned that certain associates of Mr. Steele's and Pabst management were discussing the possibilities of merging Pepsi-Cola and Pabst. The merger that almost was, never was.

On October 4th, 1939 the Pepsi-Cola Company introduced a couple of jovial cops somewhat reminscent of Mark Sennetts Keystone Cops, to readers in 712 newspapers across the country. The cartoon strip was called, "Pepsi and Pete... The Pepsi-Cola Cops.

The introduction of the Pepsi-Cola Cops marked a noticeable change in the emphasis of Pepsi-Cola advertising, previously all advertisment was built around price, now humor was to become an additional vehicle to sell Pepsi-Cola.

The idea for a Pepsi-Cola comic strip was thought up by Walter Mack, then President of the Pepsi-Cola Company, who wanted to use Popeye for the cartoon strip. The idea was to replace spinach with Pepsi-Cola. Unfortunately the Company who owned the rights to Popeye wanted more money for him than Pepsi-Cola could afford to pay at that time. At this point Walter Mack decided to use the Pepsi-Cola Cops. When I asked Mr. Mack if he had any regrets in not purchasing Popeye he said, "No, because the Pepsi-Cola Cops had accomplished what we wanted them to do." Some felt the key to the success of the Pepsi-Cola Cops comic strip was Walter Mack's insistence that while selling the product the comic strip should be funny. Mr. Mack's theory must have been right, the comic strip ran for eleven years from October 1939 until sometime in 1950.

During their eleven year run the small cop and the large cop alternated using the names of Pepsi and Pete, due possibly to the fact that several different artists drew the comic strip.

In their initial appearance Pepsi and Pete revealed the roles they were to play.

One puts a tape measure around the bottle and declares, "I make sure you get a big, big bottle - 12 full ounces." His companion is shown in the act of sampling the product says, "I make sure it's wholesome and grand tasting."

In addition to the comic strip in the sunday newspaper, the Pepsi-Cola Cops also appeared in various magazines. During 1940 the Pepsi-Cola Cops appeared in "LOOK" magazine, they were used in half page ads using the format of the ad below. Besides the print median the Pepsi-Cola Cops were used on tin signs, cardboard stand-ups, matchbook covers, paper cups and drinking glasses. There may be other novelty items that the Pepsi-Cola Cops appeared on, if you know of any please let us know.

The above ad came from LOOK magazine, February 1947. It was a half page ad printed in two colors.

The below comic strip came from the comic section of a 1947 Sunday newspaper. the comic strip was printed in color.

THAT PEPSI SPIRIT

Recently I've received some information on Pepsi-Cola's involvement with the Smithsonian Institution, specifically the Archives Center of the National Museum of American History. Pepsi-Cola's involvement with the museum is purely non-commercial and donated items will not receive promotional rights or consideration.

Listed below are the highlights of a number of on going projects:

Memorabilia Collection

Pepsi USA donated all historical inventory of flat art to the museum for use in building exhibits, conducting research, etc. This donation included antique adds, tear sheets, pop, booklets, brochures, and records. Because of restricted space, we did not donate three-dimensional objects.

Oral History Project

Pepsi funded a research program which involved subsidizing a full time historian to revisit and interview all of those (25) who played a key role in creating and sustaining the Pepsi Genaration advertising campaign for the past 22 years.

Historical Ads Collection

Pepsi has recently donated to the Simthsonian a complete, air quality set of every television commercial we've ever made. This inventory will be permanently housed at the Archives Center and open to the public for review, entertainment and research.

Pepsi-Cola Story

Smithsonian researchers will include Pepsi advertising as one of the 10 best consumer product campaigns of all time. Their selections will be honored in a book which is due to be published in 1987.

A word of caution to anyone who has something they think the Smithsonian would be interested in, they should know two things: 1) the Smithsonian will not buy any items; they must be donated: 2) storage space is a real problem at the museum. As such, the curators do not accept the donation of three-dimensional objects. Their interest centers primarily on printed matter.

COLLECTORS INFORMATION

On my latest excurison to the toy store I found some new Pepsi items that I've added to my collection. A battery operated pencil sharpner in the shape of a Pepsi can selling for $6.00 and a Pepsi notebook for $3.00, these items were found at Toys R Us.

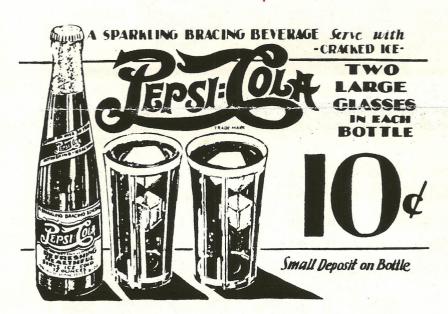

Be on the lookout for a new Pepsi-Cola sign that has the double dot logo and a Pepsi-Cola cop on it. There is nothing wrong with the sign but make sure you buy it as a new sign and not an old one.

Speaking of the Pepsi-Cola cops does anyone have or know of the Pepsi-Cola Cop glasses issued in the early 1940's? We would like to have any information on them available.
