"...Justin was a well rounded person who loved his friends and family very much...He made sure that he was going to live his life to the fullest no matter what. It did not matter what was going on during his life at that point, you knew he was going to have a grin on his face. Seeing Justin always smiling through the good and the bad, made me realize that even the bad is worth smiling for. Everything happens for a reason and you just have to embrace everything that comes at you, that's what Justin did." - Mathew Horton

"I originally intended to get a degree in Art History, but seeing as that is only suitable for a rarity in job listings, I decided to move to graphic design, where I can still study art history for all of my elective courses, while gaining a degree in a more marketable profession. Upon finding the Art Institute, I have felt very comfortable with the programs, courses, and class sizes, and feel that I can optimize my learning there." - Jamie Cain
