60th Anniversary of Channel 12

When Channel 12 first went on the air on July 1, 1953, the news looked very different than it does today. Reporters from existing news organizations like radio and newspapers were the first faces that greeted viewers on black and white TV. For example, Dick Cornish, father of KWCH anchor Roger Cornish, had been working at a Hutchinson radio station in the 1950's. He applied for a job at Channel 12 and was hired as a staff announcer.

"There were no TV people to hire, obviously, so you hired from radio. It was the only broadcasting there was at the time," said Roger Cornish. "If I have my story right, he was on the staff the day they went on the air." (Roger is son of Dick Cornish)

KTVH was established as the first Television station in Hutchinson, Kansas, which is still our city of license. KTVH was originally owned by a group of insightful business men & women from Hutchinson, who formed Hutchinson TV, Inc. The members were John P. Harris who owned the Hutchinson New-Herald and some Radio stations. Bess Wyse Rickard who owned KWBW-Radio in Hutchinson, W.D.P. Carey who was an attorney & owned Carey Salt Company, located in Hutchinson. Other members of the Company were Howard Carey, Wesley Brown, Jack Child, L.T. Child, James Davis, Ray Dillon who owned Dillon's Grocery Stores, Howard Peterson who later became the General Manager of KTVH, G.C. Waddell, Hap Stevens & R.J. Langenwalter. The Federal Government allocated only one new TV station to Kansas, and that was given to the Hutchinson area.
