

Changing Our World

As I sit at my desk thinking about what I was doing this last weekend, I look at a picture I took of the 60 men who attended our Emmaus weekend. 40 of those men were there to take care of 20 men. Their goal was simple, they just wanted to show them how much God loved them. They were making change in our world.

All that was asked of those 20 men was for their time. Time to examine their lives', to reflect on being husbands, fathers, and God fearing men. They would be as close to God as humanly possible. They will go home with the knowledge of what the other 40 men have learned. They will encourage their children to come to know God. They will get involved in their churches, They know that it is important to give their lives working to glorify God.

They have formed relationships with other Christian men. They to will have the opportunity to work at a Walk and share their good news. They will be better fathers, husbands, and good neighbor's.

They will be part of a worldwide group that pray's and supports each other. Emmaus is not a replacement for church. It's an opportunity to examine what God has asked all of us to do, not to turn their face away when asked to get involved in God's Body of Christ on this earth.
