Eucharistic Prayer

The Eucharistic Prayer “by its very nature is the climax of the whole celebration”. The priest prays it aloud, reciting or singing it according to the rubrics and during this time “there should be no other prayers or singing, and the organ or other musical instruments should be silent”, except for the people’s acclamations that have been duly approved.

The Eucharistic Prayer is to be recited by the priest alone, or with concelebrants, in full. Concelebrants are reminded that parts spoken by all the concelebrants together, and especially the words of consecration, which all are bound to say, are to be said in such a way that the concelebrants speak them in a very low voice (sotto voce) and that the principal celebrant’s voice be clearly heard.

Especially during the Eucharistic Prayer, in the celebration of Holy Mass, deacons and lay persons are not permitted to offer prayers, or to perform actions which are proper to the celebrating priest.

The people are always involved actively and never merely passively in the Eucharistic Prayer: for they silently join themselves with the priest in faith, as well as in their interventions during the course of the Eucharistic Prayer as prescribed, namely in the responses in the Preface dialogue, the Sanctus, the acclamation after the consecration and the Amen after the final doxology.

A little before the consecration, when appropriate, a server rings a bell as a signal to the faithful. According to the custom in the Archdiocese of Portland in Oregon, a server may also ring a bell as the priest elevates the consecrated host and then the chalice.

From the epiclesis until the priest shows the chalice, the deacon normally remains kneeling. If the deacon is unable to kneel, he should remain standing.

“At the final doxology of the Eucharistic Prayer, the deacon stands next to the priest, holding the chalice elevated while the priest elevates the paten with the host, until the people have responded with the acclamation, Amen.”
