

Historic Houses

The “Peacock House” built in 1917 on Okeechobee Road, Fort Pierce, by ancestors of St. Lucie historian Ada Coates Williams. It was given to wealthy rancher O.L. Peacock Jr., who moved it to his property in 1968.

The Peacocks were county pioneers who owned much of what is Port St. Lucie today. It was a residence until 2006, when it was abandoned.

Sonny Peacock built the “hunting lodge” in 1952. It was used until 2006, when it was used for storage until until 2015, when it also was abandoned.

Developers moved the board and batten buildings to a location near the city’s recently acquired McCarty Ranch property, which is now a recreational area.

The buildings were moved via road from that location in western St. Lucie County to the current site. The plan is for the lodge to become a Port St. Lucie museum and the house to be partially restored to reflect its past.
