About

WHAT IS ENVIRONMENTAL LEARNING THEATRE?

Environmental Learning Theatre is an environmental education program developed by Georgia nonprofit, Waste for Use, Inc. The program brings art and environmental education together to offer an innovative education enrichment experience.

PROGRAM MISSION

The objective of Environmental Learning Theatre is to connect audiences with messages about the role of humans in shaping environmental conditions and the role the natural environment plays in human health.

Using storytelling, Environmental Learning Theatre addresses a spectrum of environmental issues. Through connectedness and sharing, storytelling as art provides a powerful method to connect with audiences.

The importance of Environmental Learning Theatre lies within its power to shape early learning to impact attitudes and behaviors that support a healthy natural environment.

PROGRAM PRODUCTIONS

Environmental Learning Theatre's prize production is The Environmental Adventures of Marley and Friends. The Environmental Adventures of Marley and Friends is presented through puppetry and is a story of discovery, reflection, and ultimately growth. Particularly, the actors of the story journey by discovering and reflecting about problematic environmental practices and learning new practices that address challenging environmental circumstances.
