I have been in the practice of forensic psychology in New Mexico since 1987. I have conducted over 4,000 evaluations and I have supervised many additional cases. Evaluations in criminal cases pertain to risk analysis, mitigation, criminal responsibility, specific intent, competency and alternative sentencing.

I have been qualified at court over 300 times as an expert in clinical psychology, forensic psychology, the evaluation and treatment of sex offenders, and the amenability of juveniles to rehabilitation.

Cases have included every type of sexual offense, capital murder, other violent crimes, drug and property crimes and probation violations. Many defendants had long histories of abuse, neglect and mental health issues, including substance abuse and antisocial lifestyle concerns.

I also have been involved in over 300 security clearance and fitness for duty cases for the U.S. Dept. of Energy (DOE) and the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA).

Sex offender cases have included male and female defendants from pre-adolescent to geriatric ages. Their offenses have been quite diverse. Recently, Internet crimes have become more common, including child pornography, electronic solicitation of minors, and other crimes.

Psychosexual evaluations in custody disputes have become more frequent. The question in these cases is whether or not one or both parents has sexuality issues that are pertinent to custody decisions.

The Abel Assessment of Sexual Interest is a test that determines a person's sexual preference. The test has been shown to meet the Daubert criteria for evidence in many courts, including in New Mexico. I am highly expert in this test and I have testified in two Daubert hearings.

Evaluations have been conducted at the request of defense counsel, the prosecution and on direct order by the presiding judge. I have had state court cases from New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, Colorado, Utah, Washington, New York and Florida. I also have had cases in the U.S. District Courts, courts martial and several tribal courts.

Please contact me if you want to discuss whether an evaluation may be of benefit in one of your cases, or if you require additional information.

Sincerely,

Moss Aubrey, Ph.D.
