8:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m.

Blue Ridge Community & Technical College Martinsburg, West Virginia

Emergency medical services in West Virginia is in crisis. In recent years, over forty agencies have closed their doors leaving communities void of service and increasing the workload on neighboring agencies. Many of these services have ceased operation due to a lack of formally trained supervisory and managerial staff.

Join the West Virginia EMS Advisory Council for this important, two-day program designed to provide the tools an emerging or experienced EMS supervisor needs to find leadership success. Topics on business finance, medical direction, human resources, critical thinking, quality improvement and more will be offered as we raise the bar on EMS leadership in our state.

This program is presented without charge and is approved for continuing education credit by the West Virginia Office of EMS.
