President's Message

Shelly Mowinkel, NSBEA President

By the time you start reading this article, the first month of the spring semester will have already passed us by. New Year's resolutions may or may not already be by the wayside, papers to be graded may or may not be piling up on your desk, and if you are an FBLA advisor you may or may not be furiously finishing up those SLC registrations! As we all know, the spring semester will continue to fly by fast and furious.

So with a month into the 2015 year, what are you doing so far this year to live a better story? What is it that you would do if you knew you wouldn't fail? What would you do to be that person who makes everyone around you feel like somebody? What have you tried this year that has made you a better teacher? What have you tried this year that has made you a better person? What have you tried this year that has made you a better leader?

One of my favorite quotes comes from Steve Jobs:

"Here's to the crazy ones. The misfits. The rebels. The troublemakers. The round pegs in the square holes. The ones who see things differently. They're not fond of rules. And they have no respect for the status quo. You can quote them, disagree with them, glorify or vilify them. About the only thing you can't do is ignore them. Because they change things. They push the human race forward. And while some may see them as the crazy ones, we see genius. Because the people who are crazy enough to think they can change the world, are the ones who do."

So, you have got to be thinking where in the world is Shelly going with this? I want you to look at yourself as a crazy one. Think of yourself crazy enough to change those around you...or even change the world. Students today need teachers who are crazy enough to make life-changing lessons, to excite them about learning, to take them beyond "Googling for answers." Students want to create, they want to show their passions, they want to embrace their learning, because they are going to be the ones who will eventually also change the world. What have you tried this year that has made you a better teacher?

There are endless lists and books on what to do before one graduates high school, lists on what to do before age 50, to even lists of the most majestic places to visit. I am sure all of us could list book after book on what the best leaders do differently or what great teachers do differently. However, have you ever created a list for yourself? What is your passion? What would you like to learn more about? We all need to find the balance in growing our personal lives with that of growing in our professional lives. Crochet. Travel. Bake. Take up photography. Write. What have you tried this year that has made you a well-rounded person?

NSBEA is looking for members to step up and become leaders; we need members who will take our great organization into the future. Don't be afraid to try, see yourself as a genius (or maybe a little crazy), see yourself as making those around you feel like somebody. See yourself as making those around you better. I definitely know that when I was asked to become President-Elect two years ago, I doubted my abilities. I was afraid I didn't know enough about NSBEA. I was afraid I would fail. However, I did know it was my time to give back to a great organization; to serve an organization that has given so much to me. Now along the way, I hope I am providing opportunities to help members become teachers, to become better people. My hope is that I am helping you write a better story.

Our nominations committee is going to be asking members to fill a leadership role. Our Past-President is going to be asking members to attend the Leadership Development Institute in June. Consider saying "yes" to either or both of these. Consider, seeing yourself as becoming a better leader.

Don't be afraid to fail. Be afraid not to try. And maybe in the process, you will write a better story for yourself.

ReConnect

Angie Chittick, President-Elect

As a New Year begins, the phrase "out with the old—in with the new" comes to mind. However, it is important to remember to ReConnect with students, colleagues, administrators, etc. from the past.

Prior to the holiday break, North Platte Community College (NPCC) hosted the first ever PBL alumni dessert reception/reunion. It was refreshing to ReConnect with past PBL members and learn of all their accomplishments. Following were some of the postings on FaceBook following the reunion:

"Thank you to two of the best North Platte Community College instructors Angie Chittick & Jean Condon for being such great mentors to so many, for the PBL Alumni dessert tonight, and for giving me some of the most memorable moments in my life."

"PBL really changed my life and opened the door to opportunities that I didn't know were available."

"You made a tremendous impact on my life – I mean that – more than you will ever realize."

As teachers and mentors it is gratifying to know that you truly are making a difference. After all, isn't making a difference in students' lives what teaching is all about? Teaching is not just providing the skills and strategies for learning but giving students the motivation and confidence for life-long learning.

With today's technology, it is easier than ever to make these connections through a social networking or mobile app. Many of the best social networking apps out there have been around for a while such as Facebook, Instagram, SnapChat, LinkedIn, Pinterest, Twitter, etc; however, as smartphones get smarter so do the apps. According to Business Insider, some of the best social networking apps besides the ones listed include some of the following newcomers:

Whatsapp – simple way to message for free

Secret – lets you post and comment anonymously

TapTalk – makes it easy to send photos and videos quickly

For those of you looking for new mobile apps...have you tried the following?

Connect -- instantly finds your friends and contacts on Facebook and other social networks – mapping where they are and what they are doing in real time.

Hi -- a free communication app that makes free WiFi/video calls. You may also send text, voice, image and video messages as well.

Rounds – free group video chat that allows you to easily connect through text or audio.

The best news is all of these connection tools and/or apps are "free". It is so easy to stay in touch in today's workplace. Make those resolutions today to reconnect and see how you have inspired and/or changed someone's life. This will give you the motivation to continue to teach and inspire others as you prepare for the second term.

NSBEA Fall Conference Recap

Shelly Mowinkel, NSBEA President

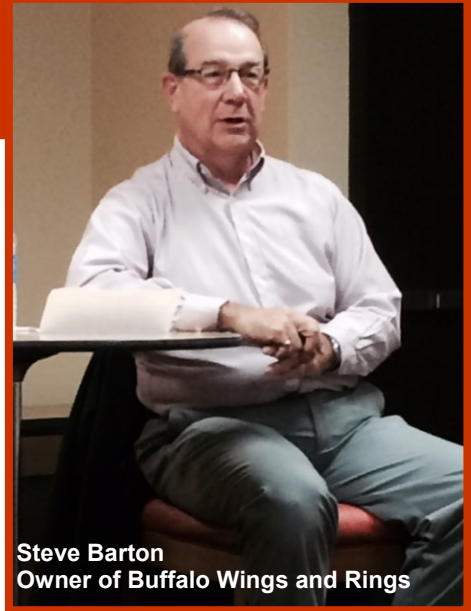

The 2014 NSBEA Fall Conference took place on Saturday, November 8, with over 65 business, information technology, and pre-service teachers in attendance. After attendees registered they enjoyed a continental breakfast sponsored by Kristin McDonald of Cengage Learning. Hudl, a company that provides video analysis software for coaches

Island Ice. Both entrepreneurs discussed the many aspects of being business owners, especially what it is like having a business in the Railyard area. All four panelists agreed authentic learning takes place when failures/challenges arise.

After the panel discussion, Brett West took the business teachers on a tour of the Railyard area and discussed the CUBE. The CUBE is the set of digital screens that face the Railyard courtyard and Canopy Street. A highlight of the tour was viewing a NSBEA video on the CUBE.

Many conference attendees commented that they had a great time learning about the exciting and innovative businesses in Lincoln.

and athletes around the world, began the morning with a fantastic presentation and tour. Hudl has been voted as one of Lincoln's best places to work. After learning about what makes Hudl such a unique place to work, the group walked over to the Hyatt for a panel discussion.

The panel discussion comprised of Will Scott and Brett West both of WRK, LLC. WRK, LLC is a creative real estate company whose purpose is to cultivate a positive change. Will Scott along with his twin brother, Robert, helped develop the vision behind the Railyard/Canopy Street area. Brett West who has an architecture background has an integral part in bringing the vision of WRK, into reality. The panel also included two entrepreneurs, the owner of Buffalo Wings and Rings, and the owner of Breezy

Business Education National Hall of Fame

By Wanda Samson, Fremont, Nebraska

It was a crisp, sunny day in Whitewater, Wisconsin. The leaves had fallen, not like in Nebraska where the leaves were still hanging on. It is November 1, 2014. A reception was held with The Chancellor's Quartet playing. After a Champagne Toast, the luncheon was held at the Young Auditorium Terrace; half of the room surrounded with ceiling-to-floor windows to allow for a look at campus during lunch. Hyland Hall, housing the Business Education National Hall of Fame, was visible. After lunch, the plaques were unveiled, remarks were given by the nominators, and the plaques were hung in the Hall of Fame. It was a GREAT day.

It was a special day on the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater campus. In even years one to three business educators are inducted into the Business Education National Hall of Fame. One of those honored was Dr. Gordon F. Culver. As many of you know, he is Nebraska's Dr. Culver!

Dr. Culver received his BS and MS in Business from Oklahoma State University. He received his Doctorate in Secondary Education from University of Nebraska, returning later to begin his tenure at UNL from 1961 to 1990. He served as Professor and Head of Business Education in the Teacher's College.

It would be impossible to count the number of students who are better people today because of his teaching and mentoring.

There were many things to learn about Dr. Culver. Did you ever wonder what his dissertation was about? An Analysis of Student-Teaching Experiences In Selected High School Business Subjects was the title. He looked at the subjects of Bookkeeping, General Business, Shorthand, and Typewriting, of course!

His paper was 351 pages long, close to a ream of paper! Remember this is 1958, no easy re-dos and probably typed more than once. Can you say manual typewriter? Can you say maybe carbon paper? The Table of Contents took four pages. There were seven appendixes in the back and it took seven pages to describe the 76 tables in the dissertation.

In the acknowledgements his final comment was toward his first wife and mother of his children, Erma. He acknowledged her patience, encouragement, and assistance. Without her support this study would not have been started or completed. She was the one who typed the final copy and he said it was indeed a masterful job! You may remember him giving credit to Erma during his teaching days. She was the one who kept the house going and took care of the children so Dr. Culver could do what he did best, business education. He and Erma were married over 50 years before her death.

Dr. Culver was purposeful in naming two of his sons. Robert Wayne Culver, who attended the ceremony with his wife, Mariann, was named after two faculty advisers, Robert Lowery from Oklahoma State and Wayne House from UNL who recommended Dr. Culver for head of Teacher's College. Gregg Culver was named after John Robert Gregg; ironically, Dr. Culver was given the John Robert Gregg award at NBEA in 1982.

Dr. Culver represented us well as he was NBEA President 1977-78, National DPE President 1974-75, and M-PBEA President 1970-71. In 1966 he established Alpha Upsilon Chapter of DPE for Nebraska. Fortunately our chapter is still going strong, unlike many other chapters who have dissolved.

Besides his career in Business Education, he served three years in the U. S. Army in World War II. He rose from Private to Master Sergeant, utilizing his secretarial and administrative management skills. In March, 1945, at Klatovy, Czechoslovakia, on VE Day, he was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Meritorious Service.

After retirement, he became a Master Gardner and volunteered many hours of community service. He also was involved in SAGE (Sharing Across Generations for Enrichment) which is now known as OLLI (Osher Lifelong Learning Institute). He taught 28 classes for OLLI and served on the advisory board.

Dr. Culver lived his life to the fullest. He always had a smile on his face, a twinkle in his eye, a quick pace when walking, and the most positive attitude anyone could possess. He expected us to be professionally involved. He mentored hundreds of pre-service students, new teachers, and graduate students. He had a passion for Nebraska Football! He was so respected that to this day, many find it hard to call him Gordon.

During the last 16 years of his life he was married to Sid Hahn Culver, who survives. Besides being in charge of Foreign Language at UNL like Dr. Culver was to Business Education, she was an accomplished musician. Their home together for many years was large enough for her piano. When M-PBEA was in Lincoln one year, Sid provided the music during the Awards Banquet. Their last attendance at M-PBEA occurred in Kansas. When word got out they had arrived, Nebraskans hurried over to greet “our” Dr. Culver. It was a moment to remember and cherish.

The other inductee was Dr. Calfrey C. Calhoun, nominated by Dr. Wanda Stitt-Gohdes. She was just as passionate about Dr. Calhoun as I was about Dr. Culver! Dr. Calhoun (1928-2007) was NBEA President from 1980-81 and received the John Robert Gregg Award in 1981. If you are an M-PBEA member, you can read a bit more about him in the Winter 2014 Notes and Quotes.

To date 34 people are in the Business Education National Hall of Fame. Dr. Culver and Fred E. Winger (who was from Oregon, but began in Nebraska where he received his BA at UNL in 1934) are the only Nebraskans. Nebraska has every reason to be proud of one of the newest inductees. The Notes and Quotes article also mentions M-PBEA members who have been inducted.

Nominations are taken by May 1 in even numbered years. Nominees must have made a difference for Business Education and have been deceased at least three years by the nomination deadline. If you have someone you would like to nominate, email Karla Saeger at saegerk@uww.edu for information and the nomination form.

It was my privilege to nominate and speak for Dr. Culver at the induction. It was a perfect day and I would not have changed a thing.

... Later in the day the Nebraska Cornhuskers prevailed against the Purdue Boilermakers 35-14. Dr. Culver looked down over Nebraska and thought to himself, “It was a GREAT day!”
