To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to whole-heartedly recommend that you hire Sean Nealon.

Sean worked with the team at Harmonix for six months, and during that time, he demonstrated that he is hard-working, motivated, focused, delightful to ideate with, and just generally all-around rad.

I often tell Sean that he has a “weird brain” – and I mean that as the highest possible compliment; he has that rare combination of technical savvy and creativity that often results in utterly unique ideas and bold solutions. Brain’s like Sean’s are the ones that change and shape the creative landscape in profound ways.

If you are reading this before fall of 2017, then you will not yet have experienced the game that Sean was primarily working on here at Harmonix – you might instead see something appropriately vague listed on his resumé, like “unannounced digital/physical game.” This is unfortunate, because if I may be so bold, this unannounced title is straight-up awesome, and a lot of its awesomeness has to do with Sean’s work. It’s frustrating not to be able to give you all the specifics, but please trust that by the end of this year, you will be duly blown away by what Sean has added to the world of video games.

Along with the talent that he has already demonstrated, I believe that Sean has tremendous potential. He has his pulse on the latest technical advancements, and he has added tremendous creative energy to our ideation process. Sean has the ability to get his co-workers enthused about an idea, and excited to do their best work in order to bring those ideas to fruition.

I confidently recommend Sean Nealon. I know that he will bring dedication, energy, and most importantly, his powerfully “weird brain” to your organization.

Please feel free to contact me if you would like to discuss Sean’s qualifications and experience further. I’d be happy to expand on my recommendation.

Best wishes,
