Using Natural Stone Countertops in Outdoor

Outdoor kitchens or BBQ are a wonderful bonus to any home. Whether you like to entertain large groups of people or just enjoy spending time in the great outdoors, an outdoor Countertops not only extends your family's living space, but it also adds value to your home. Cooking is both easier and healthier in an outdoor kitchen or BBQ as well.

When it comes to building an outdoor BBQ or kitchen, some items are a given, for example a stainless steel barbecue grill, a stone fire pit, and teak patio furniture. Using items made from natural elements, like stone and wood, complement the patio feeling of an outdoor kitchen. These items are also earth-friendly, which is always a bonus.

Another item to consider in your outdoor kitchen is the countertop space. You need something that will provide enough area to prepare and serve meals while holding up to harsh weather and extreme temperatures. This is why granite countertops are the first choice for homeowners with outdoor Tops. Granite, marble, quartzite, soapstone, limestone is an eco-friendly material that is built to last, even though need to be maintain.

Maintaining Your Outdoor Stone Countertops

Your new. Granite, marble, quartzite, soapstone, limestone countertops will look fabulous. But how do you keep them looking that way? Sunshine and rain will naturally wash away stains from food, Sun, rain, hail, and snow will take a toll on your countertops, but if the surface is absorbent then you will want to apply BULLGAURD sealer to prevent spills from things like wine or mustard from leaving behind a long-term mark.

Otherwise for general cleaning, you should be able to hose off your granite countertops and then use a non-abrasive detergent to remove surface dust and dirt that builds up from pollen, food spills, and other bits of general outdoor grime. A good way to slow down the buildup of gunk on your counters is to leave them covered when not in use if your outdoor tops is not covered by any kind of a roof or awning.
