

Your organization presents

A Finished Heart

- to support emotional health
- to foster empathy and caring communication
- to demonstrate the welcoming, inclusive environment that optimizes your mission.

A Finished Heart is a one-man show of story, dialogue and poetry with a musical score. I perform the conversations I shared with my husband, Chris Chenard, as I helped Chris die of pancreatic cancer.

Elliott Cherry

A Finished Heart is a real-life example of a man embracing emotional awareness and expression to engage with many of the most intense realities we can face as human beings: devastating illness, caregiving, dying and grief. A Finished Heart demonstrates how cherishing even the most difficult emotions has allowed me to survive, transform and thrive.

By presenting A Finished Heart, you give audience members an opportunity to learn from a visceral experience of empathy. They are drawn into authentic, active listening and compassionate communication. As individuals connect with me, they are immersed in the beauty of extraordinary intimacy, bringing them to a quiet, deep connection with themselves, with each other, and with universal experience, igniting new life perspectives.

"I felt like I was in the room – I felt like I was experiencing some of the same emotions, those raw emotions that are so precious to people who love."
Camille Hopkins, Researcher, University of Chicago.

- Post-performance conversation with author/performer always included.

Celebrate Diversity. Build Community. Boost Morale.

Through A Finished Heart, we join together to share a true story of two men in love who are devoted to each other. When you present A Finished Heart to build community and to provide a model of caring, personal interaction – goals that are crucial for all of us regardless of sexual orientation, your LGBT colleagues, students, employees and clients will feel a great sense of validation, inclusion and respect.

First performed in 2009, A Finished Heart has been presented by university departments of nursing, social work, education, journalism and related fields. It has been used for clinical continuing education approved by the National Association of Social Workers (NASW) and as part of adult education programs for faith communities. In 2016, the work was invited for inclusion in New York's United Solo Festival.

How do I want to be loved as I am dying? a concept brought forth in A Finished Heart

Performances have been supported by many organizations that include AARP, Compassion & Choices, City of Portland and Multnomah County, Oregon and the Employee Assistance Program of University of Maine at Orono. Funding for performances has also been received from state and regional grants that include Portland, Oregon's Regional Arts and Culture Council, North Portland Neighborhood Services, SE Uplift Neighborhood Coalition, Maine Community Foundation, Maine Arts Commission, Maine Humanities Council and the JSL Foundation. See reviews at afinishedheart.com.

"powerful, rich and raw -- absolutely mesmerizing from start to finish"
Susan Kocen, Q Center

Request Booking Now:
afinishedheart.com

Chris Chenard & Elliott Cherry

A Finished Heart is intended as an educational and community-building experience. It does not constitute therapy, or a medical or psychological service of any kind. Always seek appropriate professional services as needed.